No. 558.

THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF WILKES COUNTY AND JOHN H. JOHNSON, SHERIFF AND EX OFFICIO TREASURER OF WILKES COUNTY, PETITIONERS,

vs.

W. N. COLER AND COMPANY, RESPONDENTS.

Petition for Writ of Certiorari Requiring the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to Certify to the Supreme Court, for Its Review and Determination, the Cause of The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and John H. Johnson, Sheriff and ex Officio Treasurer of Wilkes County, Appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, Appellees.

To the Honorable Supreme Court of the United States:

The petition of the Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and John H. Johnson, sheriff and ex officio treasurer of Wilkes county, respectfully shows:

First. That your petitioners were the appellants and W. N. Coler and Company were appellees in a cause lately pending in the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit, wherein an opinion was filed, Judges Morris and Boyd concurring therein and Judge Goff dissenting, on the fourth day of February, A. D. 1902, in said court, and a decree affirming the judgment of the circuit court for the western district of North Carolina was entered in accordance with said opinion (a certified copy of said record hereto attached), and that the said cause had been heard on certificate of the judges of said fourth circuit at the last term of the supreme court. (See opinion, Supreme Court Reporter, vol. 21, April 15th, 1901, p. —.)

Second. That the said cause involves a controversy as to the validity of certain county bonds of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, and amounting in the aggregate face value to one hundred thousand dollars, issued by Wilkes county, North Carolina, in the year 1889, and was begun by original bill filed by said W. N. Coler and Company in the circuit court for the western district of North Carolina, at Greensboro, and that the said circuit court, upon the hearing, entered a decree perpetually enjoining the said Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County from in any manner interfering with the performance of a decree declaring said bonds valid, and your petitioner, J. H. Johnson, a trustee holding thirteen thousand dollars and all of the money collected under the levy of a special tax, to meet the interest on said bonds thereafter coming into his hands, in trust for the sole purpose of paying off the interest due on said bonds to the appellees, W. N. Coler and Company, and other holders of said bonds (see decree signed by the judge in record), and that so soon as the mandate of said circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit shall be sent down in pursuance of the decree entered in conformity to said opinion, the said circuit court can proceed to enforce its judgment which has been affirmed by said circuit court of appeals.

Third. As appears from said record (filed herewith), on the third day of December, 1897, before the filing of said bill by W. N. Coler and Company in said circuit court, an action had been instituted in the superior court of Wilkes county by the Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and C. C. Wright, a tax-payer, against Clarence Call (then sheriff and ex officio treasurer, being the predecessor in office of your petitioner, Johnson), to which J. M. Turner and J. M. Wellborne became parties defendant and appealed from the judgment of Starbuck, judge, declaring said bonds invalid and restraining said treasurer from paying any part of the principal or interest purporting to be due on them, and that upon the hearing on said appeal the supreme court of North Carolina decided and adjudged (see Commissioners of Wilkes vs. Call, treasurer of Wilkes county, and J. M. Turner and J. M. Wellborne, bondholders, 123 N. C. R., 308, 327) that the said bonds were invalid and affirmed the said judgment of the said superior court restraining said treasurer from paying any part of the principal or the interest claimed to be due on them; whereupon the said J. M. Turner and J. M. Wellborne sued out a writ of error to the said supreme court of North Carolina from the Supreme Court of the United States on the 24th day of November, A. D. 1898, and, upon motion, the said judgment of the supreme court of North Carolina was affirmed and the said petition and writ were dismissed. (See J. M. Turner and J. M. Wellborne, plaintiffs in error, vs. The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County, 173 U. S., 461.)

Fourth. That by reason of a conflict between the said decision of the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit and the decision of the supreme court of the State of North Carolina rendered in the case of The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and C. C. Wright, a tax-payer, versus Clarence Call, sheriff and ex officio treasurer of Wilkes county, and J. M. Turner and J. M. Wellborne, bondholders, 123 N. C. R., 308, 327, it has become necessary for the Supreme Court of the United States to determine and declare whether the said decision of the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit and the decree in accordance with said opinion should be affirmed or whether said circuit court of appeals erred in failing to follow the decision of the supreme court of North Carolina in declaring said bonds invalid under the construction given by said court to the constitution of said State and its laws pertaining to the validity of said bonds, and that the necessity for reviewing said conflicting decisions grows out of the fact (Forsythe vs. Hammond, 116 U. S., 506, 514, 515) that so soon as the said circuit court of appeals shall send down its mandate (which is withheld to await this application) the circuit court of the western district of North Carolina will, upon motion of the appellees, order your petitioner, Johnson, treasurer, to pay over to a receiver or to the holders of said bonds any money collected by him as a levy of special tax to pay the interest on said bonds, and will order your petitioner, The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County, to levy a tax sufficient to pay any interest due on said bonds over and above such amount as may be in the hands of the receiver or of said treasurer and collected under a levy to meet interest on said bonds, whereas the supreme court of North Carolina having affirmed the judgment of Starbuck, judge of superior court of North Carolina (as appears in the attached record), enjoining and restraining the treasurer of Wilkes county from paying "any portion of the moneys belonging to the county of Wilkes and in his hands upon the principal or interest of said bonds," so that your petitioners would be subject to attachment for contempt by the said circuit court if they refuse to pay or permit the payment of interest on said bonds, and by the superior court of the State if any special tax fund already collected or hereafter collected by order of said board of commissioners as a special tax should be applied to the payment of interest on said bonds, but for the fact that the State courts will yield to the mandate of said circuit court, as issued under the supreme law of the land.

Fifth. That the opinion of the court, filed, as aforesaid, in the circuit court of appeals on the 4th day of February, A. D. 1902, was delivered by Judge Morris and Judge J. E. Boyd, of the western district of North Carolina, concurring, and Honorable Nathan Goff, judge of the circuit court, dissenting.

Sixth. That during the year 1889, when the bonds in controversy were issued, and for many years before and for about four years after said bonds were issued by the county of Wilkes, as petitioners are informed and believe, Honorable James E. Boyd, who concurred, as aforesaid, in the opinion of Judge Morris, was employed as one of the attorneys of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, which company controlled and operated, if it did not own, the Northwestern North Carolina railroad during said period, including the year 1889, and that it appears from Exhibit "A," attached to the complaint filed by your petitioners in said superior court of Wilkes county, and from other exhibits attached, that the Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County submitted the question of subscribing to the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company at the request of and by reason of promises made by the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, through its attorney, and confirmed by A. B. Andrews, its vice-president, who was authorized to act, as he certified he did.

Seventh. That during the year 1889 and for more than ten years before and about five years after the year 1889 the said Richmond and Danville Railroad Company controlled and operated, as owner or lessee, many lines of railroad, including the North Carolina railroad, extending from Goldsboro, in said State, via Greensboro, to Charlotte, in said State; the Piedmont railroad, extending from Danville, in Virginia, to said town of Greensboro, in North Carolina, and the Northwestern North Carolina railroad, extending from Greensboro to Wilkesboro, in North Carolina, and numerous other lines in Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia, and that, being one of the attorneys of the Richmond and Danville railroad system, as petitioners are informed and believe, during the whole of the year 1889 and prior and subsequent to said year, the said James E. Boyd resided in Greensboro, at the eastern terminus and intersection of said Northwestern North Carolina railroad with the main through line of said Richmond and Danville system, and kept a law office there and was one of the attorneys and advisers of said A. B. Andrews, vice-president of said Richmond and Danville Railroad Company and president of the said Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company, when the bonds now in controversy were received in payment of a subscription of $100,000 by the said county of Wilkes to the capital stock of said last-named company; and from information petitioners believe and aver that the said James E. Boyd advised the said A. B. Andrews, president of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company and vice-president of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, and the constituted authorities of both of said companies, as to the validity of said bonds issued by Wilkes county, and advised their acceptance in payment of such subscription.

Eighth. That petitioners are advised that while they could not object, under the provision of the judiciary act creating the said circuit court of appeals, to the said Judge James E. Boyd as disqualified to sit by reason of having tried the case below, the said James E. Boyd sustained such relations to the said railroad corporations at the time when said bonds were delivered in payment of said subscription that he would not have been an unprejudiced juror and probably was not free from unconscious bias, as a judge, on any question affecting the validity of said bonds, and that he ought to have objected to sitting as a member of said appellate court on the hearing of said cause decided on said fourth day of February, as petitioners are advised.

Ninth. That your petitioners are advised that, in addition to the three cases in which this honorable court has declared its purpose to exercise its plenary power of issuing writs of certiorari to review the decrees of circuit courts of appeal (one of which is in the case where there is a conflict between the rulings of one of said courts and of the highest court of a State, lying within the bounds to which its jurisdiction extends), it is essential to the fair and impartial administration of justice that such rules of judicial propriety should be prescribed by this honorable court as will insure to all litigants the opportunity to have their causes heard before judges who are not only disinterested and free from conscious prejudice, but who have never sustained such relations to the parties to the cause or the subject-matter as to offer opportunity to instill prejudice into their minds.

Tenth. That prior to said 4th day of February, 1902, when the said decision was rendered in said circuit court of appeals, and about the — day of December, A. D. 1901, and before the judges who sat upon the hearing of said appeal, as petitioners are informed through their counsel, by Judges Goff and Morris, had reached a conclusion and authorized an opinion for the court, Judge Morris sent an outline of the opinion, afterwards filed by him, to Judge Boyd at Greensboro, whereupon, as petitioners are informed and believe, the said opinion of Judge Morris or a copy thereof was sent to Honorable Charles Price, counsel for the respondents, W. N. Coler and Company, at Salisbury, the home of said counsel, and was read by several persons, and that within a few days after said opinion was so sent by Judge Morris a newspaper published in the town of Salisbury, where said counsel lives, contained an editorial statement that it was reliably informed that the Wilkes County bonds had been declared invalid by the circuit court of appeals, Judge Morris delivering the opinion of the court, Judge Boyd a concurring opinion, and Judge Goff dissenting, and that the giving out of such information, in violation of the rule of propriety usually observed by appellate courts, is worthy of consideration in determining whether Honorable James E. Boyd may not have been unconsciously prejudiced against petitioners and their cause by his previous environments and the relations sustained by him during the year 1889 to said A. B. Andrews, to whom the bonds were delivered, and to the said corporations for which said Andrews was acting, as aforesaid.

Eleventh. That on the 31st day of January, A. D. 1899, upon petition of the defendants J. M. Turner and J. M. Wellborne, as appears of record in this case, Judge O. H. Allen, of the superior court of North Carolina, then riding the circuit of which Wilkes county constituted a part, by order in the case pending in the said superior court of Wilkes county, appointed J. G. Hackett receiver and ordered him to take charge of the moneys in the hands of Clarence Call, treasurer, and such moneys as might thereafter be collected by him as a special tax levied to pay interest accrued and accruing on said bonds, and that said J. G. Hackett filed his bond (which is printed as a part of the record filed herewith) on the 23d day of February, 1899, one day after the temporary restraining order was signed at chambers in the said suit in equity instituted by W. N. Coler and Company against your petitioners and two days before the bill of complaint and subpœna therein were served on petitioners on the 25th day of February, 1899, and nearly two months before Kerr Craige was, at the hearing on April 13, 1899, appointed receiver by order of the circuit court of the western district of North Carolina.

Twelfth. That since said opinion was filed in said circuit court of appeals on the 4th day of February, 1902, an order has been made by said court of appeals, on motion and suggestion, that this petition was about to be filed, staying the mandate till after the hearing thereof, but that notwithstanding said order, and in the face of the fact that, as your petitioners are advised, the said order of said circuit court, made on the 14th day of April, 1899, appointing Kerr Craige receiver and continuing the injunction, was vacated by appeal, and cannot be enforced until the said mandate shall have been certified to the court below, an order has been issued from said circuit court of appeals since said 4th day of February, 1902, and served upon petitioner, Johnson, treasurer of Wilkes county, for the purpose of inducing the said Johnson to pay to said Kerr Craige, as receiver, all moneys in his hands that have been collected under a levy ordered to meet the interest on said bonds, although the said J. G. Hackett had been appointed, on motion of said Turner and Wellborne, receiver of the same fund and had qualified before the 22d day of February, 1899, when the subpœna was issued in said suit in equity brought by respondents, and that on February 23, 1899, said J. G. Hackett filed his bond as receiver, a copy of which appears in the record filed herewith.

Thirteenth. That prior to the publication of said decision, on the 4th day of February, 1902, the said circuit court of appeals had delivered an opinion, in which all of the members of the court concurred (96 Fed. Rep., 284), in the case entitled The Board of Commissioners of Stanly County et al., appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, and had decided that certain bonds issued by the county of Stanly were invalid, and that one of the questions upon which the validity of said bonds depended was whether the said circuit court of appeals would determine, as it did decide, to follow the decision of the supreme court of North Carolina in holding that sections 1900 to 2000 of the Code of said State did not authorize the issuing of bonds by Stanly county in aid of a railroad built through a portion of said county, and that, the same question having arisen in the case of the Wilkes bonds, a petition to rehear in the said case involving the validity of the Stanly County bonds was filed, the mandate was stayed, and the case was held to await the decision by this honorable court as to the validity of the said Wilkes bonds, but that the said question was not discussed or decided in the said cause sent up on certificate of the judges, but was left open because not within the purview of the instruction asked.

Fourteenth. That subsequently, at the October term of said circuit court of appeals, argument was heard in the two cases together, involving, respectively, the validity of the bonds of Wilkes and Stanly counties (The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and J. H. Johnson, treasurer, appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, appellees, and The Board of Commissioners of Stanly County et al., appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, appellees), and the court, the personnel of which had been changed by substituting Judge Boyd in place of Judge Brawley, delivered an opinion reversing its former decision in the said case involving the validity of said Stanly County bonds and the sufficiency of said sections of the code, as authority for issuing bonds in payment of subscriptions to the stock of railroad companies, Judges Morris and Boyd concurring, and Judge Goff dissenting.

Fifteenth. That your petitioners, therefore, respectfully submit that under the rule laid down in Forsythe vs. Hammond referred to, and in the exercise of its plenary power, this court should authoritatively and finally determine and settle the questions which have given rise to an unseemly conflict between the courts of the United States of America and the supreme court of North Carolina, and should also consider other matters alleged in this petition in order to show that it is just and equitable to review the said ruling of said circuit court of appeals.

Wherefore your petitioners respectfully pray that a writ of certiorari may be issued out of and under the seal of this court, directed to the United States circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit, commanding said court to certify and send to this court, on a day certain to be therein designated, a full and complete transcript of the record and all proceedings of said circuit court of appeals in said case therein entitled The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County et al., appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, appellees, No. 319, to the end that the said cause may be reviewed and determined by this court, as provided in section 6 of the act of Congress entitled "An act to establish circuit courts of appeal, and to define and to regulate in certain cases the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, or that your petitioners may have such other or further relief or remedy in the premises as to the court may seem appropriate and in conformity with said act and with the recognized principles of law applicable to the matters set forth in the petition, and that the said judgment of the said circuit court of appeals in the said cause and every part theref be reviewed by this honorable court.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

No. 247.

THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF WILKES COUNTY AND JOHN H. JOHNSON, SHERIFF AND EX OFFICIO TREASURER OF WILKES COUNTY, PETITIONERS,

vs.

W. N. COLER AND COMPANY, RESPONDENTS.

Petition for Writ of Certiorari Requiring the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to Certify to the Supreme Court, for its Review and Determination, the Cause of the Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and John H. Johnson, ex Officio Treasurer of Wilkes County, Appellants, Against W. N. Color and Company, Appellees.

To the Honorable Supreme Court of the United States:

The petition of the Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and John H. Johnson, sheriff and ex officio treasurer of Wilkes county, respectfully shows:

First. That your petitioners were the appellants and W. N. Coler and Company were appellees in a cause lately pending in the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit, wherein an opinion was filed, Judges Morris and Boyd concurring therein and Judge Goff dissenting, on the fourth day of February, A. D. 1902, in said court, and a decree affirming the judgment of the circuit court for the western district of North Carolina was entered in accordance with said opinion (a certified copy of said record being hereto attached), and that the said cause had been heard on certificate of the judges of said fourth circuit at the last term of the supreme court. (See opinion, Supreme Court Reporter, vol. 21, April 15, 1901, p. —.)

Second. That the said cause involves a controversy as to the validity of certain county bonds of the denomination of one thousand dollars each and amounting in the aggregate face value to one hundred thousand dollars, issued by Wilkes county, North Carolina, in the year 1889, and was begun by original bill filed by said W. N. Coler and Company in the circuit court for the western district of North Carolina, at Greensboro, and that the said circuit court, upon the hearing, entered a decree perpetually enjoining the said Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County from in any manner interfering with the performance of a decree declaring said bonds valid, and declaring your petitioner, J. H. Johnson, a trustee, holding thirteen thousand dollars and all of the money collected under the levy of a special tax, to meet the interest on said bonds thereafter coming into his hands, in trust for the sole purpose of paying off the interest due on said bonds to the appellees, W. N. Coler and Company, and other holders of said bonds (see decree signed by the judge, in record), and that so soon as the mandate of said circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit shall be sent down in pursuance of the decree entered in conformity to said opinion the said circuit court can proceed to enforce its judgment, which has been affirmed by said circuit court of appeals.

Third. As appears from said record (filed herewith), on the third day of December, 1897, before the filing of said bill by W. N. Coler and Company in said circuit court, an action had been instituted in the superior court of Wilkes county by the Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and C. C. Wright, a tax-payer, against Clarence Call (then sheriff and ex officio treasurer, being the predecessor in office of your petitioner Johnson), to which J. M. Turner and J. M. Welborne became parties defendant and appealed from the judgment of Starbuck, judge, declaring said bonds invalid and restraining said treasurer from paying any part of the principal or interest purporting to be due on them, and that upon the hearing on said appeal the supreme court of North Carolina decided and adjudged (see Commissioners of Wilkes County vs. Call, treasurer of Wilkes county, and J. M. Turner and J. M. Welborne, bondholders, 123 N. C. R., 308, 327) that the said bonds were invalid, and affirmed the said judgment of the said superior court restraining said treasurer from paying any part of the principal or the interest claimed to be due on them; whereupon the said J. M. Turner and J. M. Welborne sued out a writ of error to the said supreme court of North Carolina from the Supreme Court of the United States on the 24th day of November, A. D. 1898, and upon motion the said judgment of the supreme court of North Carolina was affirmed and the said petition and writ were dismissed. (See J. M. Turner and J. M. Welborne, plaintiffs in error, vs. The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County, 173 U. S., 461.)

Fourth. That by reason of a conflict between the said decision of the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit and the decision of the supreme court of the State of North Carolina, rendered in the case of The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and C. C. Wright, a tax-payer, vs. Clarence Call, sheriff and ex officio treasurer of Wilkes county, and J. M. Turner and J. M. Welborne, bondholders, 123 N. C., 308, 327, it has become necessary for the Supreme Court of the United States to determine and declare whether the said decision of the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit and the decree in accordance with said opinion should be affirmed or whether said circuit court of appeals erred in failing to follow the decision of the supreme court of North Carolina in declaring said bonds invalid under the construction given by said court to the constitution of said State and its laws pertaining to the validity of said bonds, and that the necessity for reviewing said conflicting decisions grows out of the fact (Forsythe vs. Hammond, 116 U. S., 506, 514, 515) that so soon as the said circuit court of appeals shall send down its mandate (which is withheld to await this application) the circuit court of the western district of North Carolina will, upon motion of the appellees, order your petitioner, Johnson, treasurer, to pay over to a receiver or to the holders of said bonds any money collected by him as a levy of special tax to pay the interest on said bonds, and will order your petitioner, The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County, to levy a tax sufficient to pay any interest due on said bonds over and above such amount as may be in the hands of the receiver or of said treasurer and collected under a levy to meet interest on said bonds, whereas the supreme court of North Carolina affirmed the judgment of Starbuck, judge of the superior court of North Carolina (as appears in the attached record), enjoining and restraining the treasurer of Wilkes county from paying "any portion of the moneys belonging to the county of Wilkes and in his hands upon the principal or interest of said bonds," so that your petitioners would be subject to attachment for contempt by the said circuit court if they refuse to pay or permit the payment of interest on said bonds, and by the superior court of the State if any special-tax fund already collected or hereafter collected by order of said board of commissioners as a special tax should be applied to the payment of interest on said bonds, but for the fact that the State courts may yield to the mandate of said circuit court, as the supreme law of the land.

Fifth. That on the 31st day of January, A. D. 1899, upon petition of the defendants J. M. Turner and J. M. Welborne, as appears of record in this case (printed Record, page 75), Judge O. H. Allen, of the superior court of North Carolina, then riding the circuit of which Wilkes county constituted a part, by order in the case pending in the said superior court of Wilkes county appointed J. G. Hackett receiver and ordered him to take charge of the moneys in the hands of Clarence Call, treasurer, and such moneys as might thereafter be collected by him as special tax levied to pay interest accrued and accruing on said bonds, and that said J. G. Hackett filed his bond (which is printed as a part of the record filed herewith) on the 23d day of February, 1899, one day after the temporary restraining order was signed at chambers in the said suit of equity instituted by W. N. Coler and Company against your petitioners and two days before the bill of complaint and subpœna therein were served on petitioners, on the 25th day of February, 1899, and nearly two months before Kerr Craige was, at the hearing on April 13, 1899, appointed receiver by order of the circuit court of the western district of North Carolina.

Sixth. That prior to the publication of said decision, on the 4th day of February, 1902, the said circuit court of appeals had delivered an opinion (96 Fed. Rep., 284) in a cause entitled The Board of Commissioners of Stanley County et al., appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, and had decided that certain bonds issued by the county of Stanley were invalid, and that one of the questions upon which the validity of said bonds depended was whether the said circuit court of appeals would determine, as it did decide, to follow the decision of the supreme court of North Carolina, in holding that sections 1900 to 2000 of the Code of said State did or did not authorize the issuing of bonds by Stanley county in aid of a railroad built through a portion of said county, and that, the same questions having arisen in the case of the Wilkes bonds, a petition to rehear in the said case involving the validity of the Stanley County bonds was filed, the mandate was stayed, and the case was held to await the decision of the Supreme Court as to the validity of the said Wilkes bonds, but that the said question was not decided in the said cause sent up on certificate of the judges, but was left open because not within the purview of the instruction asked.

Seventh. That subsequently, at the October term of the said circuit court of appeals, argument was heard in the two cases together, involving respectively the validity of the bonds of Wilkes and Stanley counties (The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and John H. Johnson, treasurer, appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, appellees, and The Board of Commissioners of Stanley County et al., appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, appellees), and the court delivered an opinion reversing its former decision in the said case involving the validity of said Stanley County bonds and the sufficiency of said sections of the code as authority for issuing bonds in payment of subscriptions to the stock of railroad companies, Judges Morris and Boyd concurring and Judge Goff dissenting.

Eighth. That your petitioners therefore respectfully submit that under the rule laid down in Forsythe vs. Hammond, referred to, and in the exercise of its plenary power, this court should authoritatively and finally determine and settle the questions which have given rise to an unseemly conflict between the courts of the United States of America and the supreme court of North Carolina.

Wherefore your petitioners respectfully pray that a writ of certiorari may be issued out of and under the seal of this court, directed to the United States circuit court of appeals for the fourth district, commanding said court to certify and send to this court, on a day certain to be therein designated, a full and complete transcript of the record of all proceedings of said circuit court of appeals in said case, therein entitled The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County et al., appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, appellees, No. 319, to the end that the said cause may be reviewed and determined by this court, as provided in section 6 of the acts of Congress entitled "An act to establish circuit courts of appeals, and to define and to regulate in certain cases the jurisdiction of the courts of the United States, and for other purposes," approved March 3, 1891, or that your petitioners may have such other or further relief or remedy in the premises as to the court may seem appropriate and in conformity with said act and with the recognized principles of law applicable to the matters set forth in the petition, and that the said judgment of the said circuit court of appeals in the said cause and every part thereof be reviewed by this honorable court.

And your petitioners will ever pray.

THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF WILKES COUNTY AND
J. H. JOHNSON,
Sheriff and ex Officio Treasurer of Wilkes County,
By ALPHONSO C. AVERY,
Attorney and Counsel for Petitioners.

Alphonso C. Avery, being duly sworn, says that he is one of the attorneys and counsel for the Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and J. H. Johnson, petitioners abovenamed, and as such he had personal charge for them of the defense of the suit in equity brought by W. N. Coler and Company in the circuit court for the western district of North Carolina against your petitioners while pending in the said circuit court, and of the appeal of your petitioners to the circuit court of appeals from the institution of said suit up to the present time, and also appeared in the action in the superior court of Wilkes county entitled The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and C. C. Wright versus Clarence Call, sheriff and ex officio treasurer, and J. M. Turner and J. M. Welborne, and also in the supreme court of the State of North Carolina, when said action was heard and decided in said court, and when orders were made subsequent to the affirmance of the judgment of the superior court by said supreme court (Commissioners of Wilkes County et al. vs. Clarence Call et al., 123 N. C., 308–327), and has a more perfect and accurate knowledge of the facts alleged in the petition than the petitioners themselves, and therefore verifies the same, and that the facts therein stated are true to his best information and belief.

THE BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS OF WILKES COUNTY AND JOHN H. JOHNSON, SHERIFF AND EX OFFICIO TREASURER OF WILKES COUNTY, PETITIONERS,

vs.

W. N. COLER AND COMPANY, RESPONDENTS.

Petition for Writ of Certiorari Requiring the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit to Certify to the Supreme Court, for its Review and Determination, the Cause of The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and John H. Johnson, Sheriff and ex Officio Treasurer of Wilkes County, Appellants, vs. W. N. Coler and Company, Appellees.

AFFIDAVIT IN SUPPORT OF THE PETITION.

To the Honorable Supreme Court of the United States:

The petitioners, The Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County and John H. Johnson, sheriff and ex officio treasurer of Wilkes county, respectfully show:

First. That your petitioners have been informed through their attorney, and upon such information believe, that the respondents will deny in their answer to the petition already filed that the Hon. James E. Boyd, one of the judges who sat on the hearing in the circuit court of appeals, was one of the attorneys and counsel for the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, and was residing at Greensboro, North Carolina, when A. B. Andrews, as vice-president of said company, entered into an agreement with the Board of Commissioners of Wilkes County, which agreement constitutes a part of the printed record (see printed Record, pp. 38 to 47), to the effect that the said company would guarantee the building of the Northwestern North Carolina railroad from Winston to Wilkesboro by a time mentioned, and would accept one hundred thousand dollars in bonds of Wilkes county in payment of a subscription of a corresponding amount to the capital stock of said company by said county.

Second. That the petitioners, through their attorney, examined the docket of the superior court of Guilford county from October 1, 1887, to May 15, 1890, and that they found by such examination the following entries tending to show the relation subsisting between the Hon. James E. Boyd and the said Richmond and Danville Railroad Company to have been that of attorney and client, as alleged in the petition, to wit:

(No. 64, page 32.)

"Morehead, D. & K. / Schenck, Boyd. — N. H. D. Wilson vs. The Richmond & Danville R. R. Co.

Summons issued July 14th, 1887.
Comp't filed Aug. 30th, 1887.
Ans. Oct. 29th, 1887.
Suit abated August term, 1888, by death of pl'ff.
Judgment."

"Ball. { JESSE GRAVES vs. THE RICHMOND & DANVILLE R. R. Co. } Schenck, Boyd.

Order to sue in forma pauperis.
Comp't filed August 30th, 1887.
Jury trial August term, 1888; verdict in favor of pl'ff and assess his damages at $15.00.
Judgment August term, 1888."

(No. 81, page 41 of said docket.)

Summons issued Oct. 1st, 1887.
30 days allowed for pl'ff to file comp't and 30 days thereafter to file answer.
Compromised Mar. 22nd, 1888."

(No. 82, page 43 of said docket.)

"Morehead. { JOHN A. MALCOM vs. THE RICHMOND & DANVILLE R. R. Co. } Boyd, Schenck.

30 days to def't to ans.
Dec. T., 1887, answer filed.
Jury trial Aug. 7th, 1889.
Verdict, nonsuit, appealed.
Transcript sent to Supreme Court Oct. 17th, 1889."

Third. That it appears from the foregoing entries on the trial docket of said court that Judge Boyd was of counsel in No. 64 on said docket, as set forth above, from July 14, 1887, when summons was issued, till August term, 1888, when the action abated, and that he was of counsel for the defendant, The Richmond and Danville R. R. Company, in No. 82 from the time summons issued, October 10, 1887, until the transcript of record on appeal was sent to the Supreme Court, October 17, 1889, covering the period when the subscription was ratified and the subscription to the capital stock was made.

Fourth. That upon the said docket of the superior court the following entries also appears:

"John Barringer. } JOHN AUSTIN
Schenck, Boyd. } vs. THE RICHMOND & DANVILLE R. R. Co.

Sum. issued June 29th, 1889.
Order to sue in forma pauperis.
Complaint filed June 29th, 1889.
30 days to file answer, Aug. T., 1889.
Answer filed Sept. 17th, 1889."

(No. 229, page 115, docket.)

"J. Barringer. } WILLIAM SANDERS

(No. 242, page 121.)

"Scott. / Schenck, Boyd. — A. B. WHITE vs. THE RICHMOND & DANVILLE R. R. Co.

Summons issued Nov. 20th, 1889.
Comp't filed Dec. 11th, 1889.
30 days to file answer.
Answer filed Feb. 22nd, 1890.
Motion to remove.
Reply filed April 11th, 1890.
Pl'ff allowed to avert complaint, &c."
(Other entries not copied.)

(No. 243, page 122.)

"D. & K. / Schenck, Boyd. — MARY E. CAMPBELL, Adm'x, vs. THE RICHMOND & DANVILLE R. R. Co.

Summons issued Nov. 26th, 1889.
30 days to file comp't and 30 days thereafter to ans."

(Page 134, No. 268.)

"Forbis.	J. R. Simpson
	vs.
Schenck.	The Richmond & Danville R. R. Co.

Summons issued Feb. 4th, 1890.
Order to sue in forma pauperis.
30 days to file comp't and 30 days thereafter to ans.
Comp't filed Mar. 2nd, 1890
Ans. filed Mar. 31st, 1890.
Judgment, Dec. T., 1890."

(No. 285, page 143.)

"Barringer.	W. H. Chilcott
	vs.
Barringer, Schenck, Boyd.	The Richmond & Danville R. R. Company.

Summons issued Mar. 27th, 1890.
Order to sue in forma pauperis.
Comp't filed April 28th, 1890."

Fifth. That it appears from the foregoing entries on the docket of said court that the Hon. James E. Boyd was of counsel in various cases for the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company from October, 1887, to March, 1890; and petitioners aver that they find upon the docket of said superior court, at page 61, No. 122, the following entries:

"Douglass.	Jesse M. Douglass
	vs.
Schenck.	The Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company.

Summons issued 22nd April, 1888."

And that while no name but that of Judge Schenck is marked as counsel for the defendant in the last-named action, it was pending during the period when the Hon. J. E. Boyd was acting as counsel for the controlling company (The R. & D. Co.).

The petitioners respectfully submit that the counsel for the respondents contended before the circuit court, as appears of record, that the facts that said last-named case was still pending at the time of a foreclosure sale of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad in 1894, and that Justice Douglass, then a practicing attorney and attorney for plaintiff in said action, forbade said foreclosure sale, disqualified him from sitting afterwards and writing the opinion in Call vs. Commissioners (123 N. C., 334), because the bonds in controversy were issued in payment for stock of said company, and insist that the said controversy as to the validity of bonds was not a proper subject of consideration by Hon. James E. Boyd, who was of counsel for the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company at the time of the foreclosure sale and for the Southern Railway Company immediately after said foreclosure sale, and was, as petitioners are informed and believe, receiving a stated annual salary as counsel for the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company before said foreclosure sale, and for the Southern Railway Company immediately thereafter.

Sixth. That petitioners respectfully pray the court to be allowed to submit the foregoing in support of their contention that the Hon. James E. Boyd was disqualified to sit upon the hearing of the cause in the circuit court of appeals for the fourth circuit, at Richmond, and petitioners aver that they have raised the said question as to his disqualification in the assertion of what they conceive to be their legal rights, and disavow any purpose or desire to criticise or reflect upon the official conduct of said judicial officer, except in so far as it is necessary to do so in order to present a question of law, upon which they rely.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

BRIEF FOR PETITIONERS.

A. C. AVERY, COUNSEL FOR PETITIONERS.

THIS CASE BELONGS TO ONE OF THE CLASSES IN WHICH THE COURT HAS ANNOUNCED THAT IT WILL EXERCISE ITS PLENARY POWER BY GRANTING WRITS OF CERTIORARI TO THE CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEAL.

"We reaffirm in this case the propositions heretofore announced, to-wit, that the power of this Court in certiorari extends to every case pending in the Circuit Courts of Appeal, and may be exercised at any time during such pendency, provided the case is one which, but for this provision of the statute, would be finally determined in that Court, and, further, that while this power is co-extensive with all possible necessities and sufficient to secure this Court a final control over the litigation in all the Courts of Appeal, it is a power which will be sparingly exercised, and only when the circumstances of the case satisfy us that the importance of the question involved, the necessity of avoiding conflicts between two or more Courts of Appeal, or between Courts of Appeal and the Court of a State, or some matter affecting the interest of this Nation in its internal or external relations, demands such exercise.

"Among the considerations thus suggested are those which indicate why, in this case, the Court properly exercised its power and issued the writ of certiorari. There was a conflict between the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit and the Supreme Court of the State of Indiana. The latter Court had declared that the proceedings by which the contiguous territory was annexed to the city of Hammond were legal, and, therefore, that the territory was to be considered by all the officers of the State of Indiana as within the territorial limits of the city. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, by its decision in this case, had declared that such annexation proceedings were invalid, and that the property of the petitioner was not within the city limits. This tract of plaintiff's was not on the extreme limit of lands sought to be incorporated into the city, and, if the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals was enforced, there would be a tract of a few hundred acres within the exterior boundaries of the city of Hammond, as defined by the judgment of the Supreme Court of the State, withdrawn from the city jurisdiction, and, in fact, excepted from its territorial limits. All the unfortunate possibilities of conflict and collision which might arise from these adverse decisions were suggested when this application for certiorari was made, and, although no final decree had been entered, it seemed to us a duty to bring the case and question here for examination at the earliest possible moment."

Forsyth v. Hammond, 166 U. S., 506, 514, 515.

It will be seen by reference to pages 71, 72, 96 and 97 of the printed record, that the judgment affirmed by the Supreme Court of North Carolina, in Commissioners v. Snuggs, 121 N. C., 394, is in conflict with the judgment of the Circuit Court for the Western District of North Carolina, affirmed by the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit, at Richmond, February 4, 1902 (see printed record, page 123).

Petitioners are advised that it is sufficient, upon the hearing of the preliminary motion, to show that the case referred to in the petition belongs to a class in which the Court has declared its purpose to exercise its plenary power, by reviewing the conflicting decisions, and determining what is the law.

The two Courts whose difference have given rise to this conflict, being Courts of last resort, whose decisions, as a rule, must be followed, the petitioners take it for granted that so grave a question will not be considered by the Court which is the final arbiter without a full discussion upon the merits, after settling the preliminary motion. They will therefore, after presenting the contention that the writ ought to be granted, because Judge Boyd was disqualified on account of having been of counsel, submit a short brief to show that the issues of law raised have, at every stage of their consideration in different Courts, and upon every question involved, given rise to conflict of opinion between learned and distinguished jurists, and that these differences, according to the settled practice of the Court, will be reviewed only after hearing counsel for both parties and after due deliberation.

JUDGE BOYD WAS DISQUALIFIED BY REASON OF HIS PREVIOUS RELATIONS TO THE RICHMOND AND DANVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY, AT THE INSTANCE AND FOR THE BENEFIT OF WHICH THE SUBSCRIPTION PAID IN COUNTY BONDS WAS MADE TO THE NORTHWESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY, WHICH CONSTITUTED A PART OF THE RICHMOND AND DANVILLE SYSTEM.

FACTS APPEARING IN THE RECORD.

By reference to pages 39 and 40 of the printed record, it will appear that the order for an election to determine whether Wilkes County should make the subscription, for payment of which the bonds were issued, was not made until a proposition had been made by the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company to build a road through Wilkes County. The order recites (on page 38, printed record) that it is made in "accordance with the proposition submitted by the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company for the extension of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad," and it appears from the printed record (page 39) that, under the said order of election in the record of the Commissioners, the following was written by the attorney of said company:

"The above order is made at the request of the Richmond and Danville Railroad, and with their full concurrence.

"R. B. GLENN,

"Attorney for R. and D. R. R. Company."

On page 40 of the printed record is a telegram from A. B. Andrews, President Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company, and Vice-President of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, to R. B. Glenn, which appears to have been delivered to said Commissioners as a ratification of the agreement by the attorney, and it is in the following words:

"Raleigh, N. C., June 1, 1887.

"To R. B. Glenn:

"I learn that it has been said by some parties of Wilkes County that the proposition that you made as our attorney to extend the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad was not binding on us, as it was made by you as attorney. I hereby confirm your action, and the proposition is binding on the company.

"A. B. ANDREWS."

By reference to printed record (page 39), it will appear that the Commissioners were induced to make the subscription by the assurance that the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company would take the bonds in payment of the subscription, and would construct the road to Wilkesboro, and that the said order contained a recital that, "Whereas, the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company has made a proposition to the County Commissioners of Wilkes County to extend the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad from Winston, N. C., to Wilkesboro, N. C., in the event that Wilkes County will subscribe one hundred thousand dollars to the capital stock of said company, to be paid in bonds of said county, according to agreement filed in office of Register of Deeds," etc.

"Now, therefore, in pursuance of agreement filed, and in accordance with the stipulation therein contained, we do hereby subscribe one hundred thousand dollars to the capital stock of said company, according to stipulations of said agreement," etc.

FACTS ALLEGED IN THE PETITION.

In sections 6 and 7 of the petition, it is alleged that during the year 1887, when the bonds were issued by Wilkes County, for many years before, and about four years after 1887, Judge Boyd was employed as one of the attorneys of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, which controlled and operated a system of railroads permeating the State of North Carolina, and adjacent States, and including the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad; and that Judge Boyd, in 1889, resided and had a law-office in Greensboro, the point at which said last-named road intersected with the main line of the system, and, according to the information and belief of petitioners, advised said Andrews that the bonds in controversy were valid.

LAW RELATING TO THE QUESTION OF DISQUALIFICATION ON THE GROUND OF PREVIOUS INTEREST AND BIAS.

When, by section 3 of the act of March 3, 1891, it was provided that a Judge who should hear or try a case in the Circuit Court or District Court, should be disqualified from sitting in the Appellate Court, when his own ruling should be reviewed, the addition of this new and salutary restriction was intended as another safeguard to litigants against bias on the part of the Judges of the Appellate Court, not to abrogate those rules that had always been held to be inherent in the very nature of such Courts, and which was sanctioned by immemorial usage in the English and American Courts, and which were founded upon the experience of mankind, that in order to a fair and impartial execution of the laws, they must be administered by Judges and jurors who have had no cause to imbibe prejudice, and have not been subjected to temptation to become biased against any of the parties to actions or suits or their causes.

"The common law forbade a man being the judge of his own cause, as if 'an act of Parliament gives a man power to try all cases that arise within the manor of Dale; yet, if a cause should arise in which he himself is a party, the act is construed not to extend to that, because it is unreasonable that any man should determine his own quarrels.'

"1 Blackstone, 94."

White v. Connely, 105 N. C., 65.

"There is also a maxim of law regarding judicial action which may have an important bearing upon the constitutional validity of judgments in some cases. No one ought to be a judge in his own cause; and so inflexible, and so manifestly just is this rule, that Lord Coke has laid it down that, 'Even an act of Parliament made against natural equity, as to make a man a judge in his own cause, is void of itself; for jura naturae sunt immutabilae, and they are leges legum.'

"This maxim applies in all cases where judicial functions are to be exercised, and excludes all who are interested, however remotely, from taking part in their exercise."

"It is not left to the discretion of a Judge, or to his sense of decency, to decide whether he shall act or not; all his powers are subject to this absolute limitation; and when his own rights are in question, he has no authority to determine the cause. Accordingly, where the Lord Chancellor, who was a shareholder in a company, in whose favor Vice-Chancellor had rendered a decree, affirmed this decree, the House of Lords reversed the decree on this ground. Lord Campbell observing, 'It is of last importance that the maxim that "No man is to be a judge in his own cause," should be held sacred. And that is not to be confined to a cause in which he is a party, but applies to a cause in which he has an interest.' 'We have again and again set aside proceedings in inferior tribunals, because an individual who had an interest took part in the decision. And it will have a most salutary effect on those tribunals when it is known that this high Court of last resort, in a case in which the Lord Chancellor of England had an interest, considered that his decree, on this account, was a decree not according to law, and should be set aside.'

"This will be a lesson to all inferior tribunals, to take care not only that in their decrees they are not influenced by their personal interest, but to avoid the appearance of laboring under such influence." Dimers v. Grand Junction Canal, 3 House of Lords Cases. 759; Cooley's Cons. Lim., 410-11; Coke Lit., 212.

"No man is to be a judge in his own cause"—the rule "is not to be confined to a cause in which he is a party, but applies to a cause in which he has an interest."

Dimers v. Grand Junction Canal, supra.

No attorney who is true to his client can fail to be biased in deciding a legal question which affects his interest. The interest of the client becomes, necessarily, the interest of faithful counsel. Judge Boyd must have felt an interest in securing his client, the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, which guaranteed the building of a railroad and furnished means to build it, in consideration of the delivery of the very bonds, the validity of which is now in question, and could not be expected to divest himself of that prejudice when required to pass upon the validity of the bonds.

If the House of Lords reversed a ruling of the Lord Chancellor in favor of a corporation, because at the time he was a shareholder, what shall be said of the ruling of a Judge in favor of the validity of certain municipal bonds, accepted in lieu of money as a subscription to capital stock, and for money advanced for the construction of a railroad by "a corporation of which such Judge was the counsel when the bonds were accepted"? If the two cases can be distinguished in principle, the distinction is too refined and shadowy for one who takes a broad, common sense view of the question involved.

"No Clerk can act as such, in relation to any estate or proceeding, if he has, or claims to have, any interest therein, or if he is so related to any person having or claiming to have such interest that he would by reason of such relationship be disqualified as a juror."

Headnote in Land Company v. Jennett, 128 N. C., 3.

It was held in the same case that the probate, by an interested Clerk, of a deed was a nullity. No Court would have failed to sustain a challenge to a juror, in a controversy involving the validity of bonds, if it had appeared that he had been agent or attorney in fact for a corporation, when such corporation accepted the very same bonds as valid and in lieu of money.

THE GENERAL RULE IS THAT A DISQUALIFYING INTEREST ON THE PART OF A JUDGE MUST BE A PECUNIARY INTEREST. BUT THE FORMER RELATION OF COUNSEL IMPLIES FORMER PECUNIARY INTEREST, AND CONSEQUENTLY EXISTING BIAS.

A Judge can not, as a rule, be disqualified unless he has a present pecuniary interest in the controversy or in the subject-matter of the litigation. But the exception to the rule is that, when an attorney has been consulted as to a disputed matter, whether a suit is pending or is subsequently brought to settle such controversy, and whether he receives a fee or not, he is disqualified to sit as a Judge, either in such pending suit, or an action resulting subsequently from the dispute.

State v. Hocker, 34 Fla., 25.
Slaven v. Wheeler, 58 Texas, 23.
East Rome Town v. Cothran, 81 Ga., 350.

The broader and better rule is, that a Judge should avoid the very appearance of bias, prejudice or partiality, and should be prohibited from sitting in any case in which his interest in the subject-matter of the action is such as would naturally influence him one way or the other.

Heilbron v. Campbell, 23 Pac. Rep., 122 (Cal.).

It has been held that, where a Judge had received a general retainer from one of the parties, it would justify a demand for trial before another Judge, and that is our case. The Judge here was retained generally as counsel for the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company, which built the road and took the bonds under an agreement to construct it.

Kern Valley Water Co. v. McCord, 70 Cal., 646.

IF THE DISQUALIFICATION HAD NOT RENDERED THE JUDGMENT VOID, THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN GOOD GROUND FOR EXERCISING THE AUTHORITY GIVEN IN SEC. 6 OF THE ACT OF MARCH 3, 1891.

THE HISTORY OF THESE CONFLICTS OF OPINION.

FIRST. The bonds were declared invalid, and The Code, sections 1996 to 2000, were declared by the Supreme Court of North Carolina insufficient to authorize their issue (four Justices concurring and but one dissenting), in Commissioners v. Snuggs, 121 N. C., 394.

SECOND. The Circuit Court of Appeals reviewed the opinion of the Circuit Court of the Western District of North Carolina, declaring the bonds valid, and (all of the Judges, Goff, Morris and Brawley, concurring), reversed the ruling of the Circuit Court and followed that of the Supreme Court of North Carolina.

Commissioners v. Coler, 96 Fed. Rep., 284.

THIRD. Upon petition to rehear, filed in the Court of Appeals, the mandate was stayed and the cause was held to await the decision of the Supreme Court upon the hearing on certificate in Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 U. S., 506-524, but the Court declined to pass upon the question whether Wilkes County (or Stanly County) was empowered by sections 1996 to 2000 of The Code of North Carolina, to issue bonds in aid of railroads extending through their counties, because that did not appear to be one of the questions certified.

FOURTH. It had been held to be the duty of the Circuit Court of Appeals to follow the construction given to section 14, Article II, of the Constitution by the State Court, and one of the remaining questions is, whether the Federal Courts should follow the construction given by the State tribunal to sections 1996 to 2000 of The Code.

FIFTH. A bare majority, composed of Judges Morris and Boyd, decided to overrule the former decision of the Court of Appeals, while Judge Goff dissented. (See opinions in the printed record, at page 110 et seq.)

The Established Rule of the Federal Courts is to Resolve all Reasonable Doubts in Favor of the Construction Placed by the State Tribunals Upon Their Own Statutes.

"The construction by the Courts of a State of its Constitution and statutes is, as a general rule, binding on the Federal Courts. We may think that the Supreme Court of a State has misconstrued its Constitution or its statutes, but we are not at liberty therefore to set aside its judgments. That Court is the final arbiter as to such questions. In Claiborne County v. Brooks, 111 U. S., 400, 410 (28—470, 474), it was said: 'It is undoubtedly a question of local policy with each State, what shall be the extent and character of the powers which its various political and municipal organizations shall possess; and the settled decisions of its highest Courts on this subject will be regarded as authoritative by the Courts of the United States; for it is a question that relates to the internal constitution of the body politic of the State.' See also Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S., 20, 33; Butcher v. Cheshire R. Co., 125 U. S., 555; Detroit v. Osborne, 133 U. S., 492; South Branch Lumber Co. v. Ott, 142 U. S., 622; Kaukauna Water-Power Co. v. Green Bay and M. Canal Co., 142 U. S., 254; McElvaine v. Brush, 142 U. S., 155; Stutsman County v. Wallace, 142 U. S., 293, quoting Norton v. Where it is found that no construction had been given to a statute by the State Court, when the transaction was entered into, the Federal Courts "will lean toward an agreement of views with the State Courts, if the question seems to them balanced with doubt."

Burgess v. Seligman, 107 U. S., 17, 38.

It is true that all Courts incline to hold commercial paper, in the hands of innocent purchasers for value, valid, but nowhere, except in the concurring opinion of Judge Boyd, and in the brief of Mr. Price, have we found an intimation that in order to uphold municipal bonds, "if it can do so under any circumstances," or "if it is possible to do so," a Federal Court must lean against instead of in favor of a ruling by a State tribunal, that the creation of a debt by a municipality was ultra vires. Justice Gray, in Louisville R. Co. v. Louisville Trust Co., 174 U. S., 573, 574, said, quoting 10 Wall, 604:

"Where a party deals with a corporation in good faith, the transaction is not ultra vires, and he is unaware of any defect in authority, and there is nothing to excite suspicion of such defect or irregularity, the corporation is bound by the contract, although such defect or irregularity in fact exists."

THE CONTENTION OF THE PETITIONERS IS THAT THE AUTHORITY TO SUBSCRIBE WAS LIMITED TO A CERTAIN CLASS OF COUNTIES. IF A COUNTY WAS NOT A DONEE OF SUCH POWER, BY REASON OF BELONGING TO SUCH CLASS, IT COULD NOT CONFER SUCH AUTHORITY ON ITSELF BY RECITATIONS EITHER IN BONDS OR IN THE MINUTES OF ITS GOVERNING OFFICIALS.

If the Legislature had not intended to restrict the power of "the Boards of Commissioners of the several counties," to aid railroads, to those in which the citizens of the county may have an interest, it would have omitted the qualifying clause "when necessary to aid in the completion of a road in which the citizens of the county may have an interest," and have allowed any county to subscribe stock "to any railroad company or companies." The qualifying words are surplusage, according to the construction of the Circuit Court of Appeals.

If the clause descriptive of the company to which the subscriptions might be made is not meaningless and mere surplusage, it confers power only on a certain class of counties. If a county not authorized attempts to subscribe, it is acting ultra vires. Whether there is anything in the transaction to excite suspicion or not, a purchaser is bound to look to the power of a municipality to issue bonds, and must lose when he buys bonds issued without Legislative authority.

The language of Code, section 1996, relied upon as authority for the issue of the bonds, is as follows: "The Boards of Commissioners of the several counties shall have power to subscribe stock to any railroad company or companies when necessary to aid in the completion of any railroad in which the citizens may have an interest."

What is meant by the words, "any railroad in which the citizens of a county may have an interest"? The petitioners submit that the Courts of America and the British Empire have uniformly construed the word "interest," in such connections, to mean "pecuniary interest" in the thing referred to—here, in the railroad.

DEFINITION OF THE WORDS "INTEREST" OR "INTERESTED."

In construing a statute prohibiting any member of a council from having a direct or indirect interest in a contract of the corporation, the Supreme Court of Michigan, in Swedly v. Kirby, 79 N. W. R., 188, said: "This indicates that a pecuniary interest was intended. Anderson defines interest as such relation to the matter in issue as creates a liability to pecuniary loss or gain from the event of a suit."

Taylor v. Highway Commissioners, 88 Ill., 527.
Northampton v. Smith, 11 Met. (Mass.), 395.

In a case where the question was whether a salaried employe of a firm of contractors was interested in the contracts of the firm, the Pennsylvania Court said: "The word interested does not mean anything but pecuniary interest, and of this there is no evidence."

Dunlap v. Philadelphia, 13 W. N. C. (Pa.), 98.

The Supreme Court of Illinois, in passing upon the questions whether the State had an interest, within the meaning of the statute in a quo warranto proceeding to try title to an office, said: "The interest which a State must have in such a cause is a substantial interest, as a pecuniary interest."

McGrath v. People, 100 Ill., 461.

In State v. R. Co., 36 N. J. L., 164, the Court, drawing the distinction between estates and interest in a statute providing for condemnation of right-of-way, said: "Under the more comprehensive term, 'persons interested,' are included not only persons in whom is vested the legal title which the company proposes to acquire, * * * but also other individuals having some independent right or interest therein, * * * such as an easement of a right-of-way, inchoate rights of dower or courtesy, or incumbrances, such as by judgments or mortgages, which are charges on the legal estate. The object is * * * that their interest may be extinguished by payment."

The Supreme Court of California, construing a statute allowing a party "beneficially interested" a writ of review of an order of the Board of Supervisors, granting a right to use a highway for the purpose of constructing a railroad, held that an affidavit alleging that "affiant, in common with others living along the highway, would be damaged," was insufficient, and said:

"It does not appear by the petition in this case that the petitioner has any other or greater right in the highway mentioned therein than any other citizen of the State. * * * In an application made by a private party, his interest must be of a nature distinguishable from that of the mass of the community."

Linden v. Alneda County, 45 Cal., 7.
Ashe v. Calusa County, 71 Cal., 236.

If a person living on a highway has "no other or greater interest therein than any other citizen of the State," then a person living on or in the vicinity of an improved highway—a railroad —has no other or greater interest in the railroad than any other citizen of the State, and the citizens of Wilkes County, whether they live along or away from the line of railway, "have no other or further interest therein than any other citizen of the State."

ADDITIONAL AUTHORITIES CONSTRUING "INTEREST" AS MEANING A PECUNIARY, VALUABLE OR BENEFICIAL INTEREST, NOT MERELY A PATRIOTIC OR SENTIMENTAL INTEREST WHICH A CITIZEN OF A STATE OR COUNTY FEELS IN A PUBLIC IMPROVEMENT.

As shareholders, by reason of a subscription already made, the citizens of the county would have an interest in any contract from which, as shareholders, they might derive profit, as by making an incomplete road more valuable by extension.

Gasquet v. Johnson, 1 La., 431.

The interest which disqualifies a Judge from sitting, is held to be "a property interest" in the action and its results, not "the interest which he may have in common with other citizens in a public matter."

Sauls v. Freeman, 24 Fla., 209.
Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Kellogg, supra.

The foregoing list of authorities might be enlarged by adding scores of cases in which the word interest is interpreted in the same way, but it is not deemed necessary to cite any but the following:

Taylor v. Norment, 88 Ill., 327.
Wilson v. Railroad, 37 Ala., 358, 360.
In Real Estate of White, 37 Cal., 100.
Shelton v. Derby, 27 Conn., 415, 421, 425.
Smith v. Phillips, 62 Ala., 578.

"Interest" is defined in dictionaries, where it relates to property such as railroads, generally as a legal concern of a person in a thing, or in the conduct of another person, whether it consist in the right of enjoyment of or benefit from property or right to claim an advantage, or be subjected to a liability on account of the conduct or management of property.

In other words, an interest is either a legal right in a thing, as property, or such a relation to it as to enable one to participate in the profits of its conduct or management, or share in the loss arising from its management.

One of the definitions given by the Standard Dictionary of "interested" is "being a part-owner; as one interested in railroad shares."

It is contended for the petitioners that the citizens of a county, collectively, could only be interested, in the ordinary and obvious meaning of the word as applied to railroads, where the corporation, which embodied all rights of the citizens as a body, has some interest in the shares of its stock. This definition is in harmony with the contention of the petitioners that the last clause of section 1996 is surplusage, unless it restricts the power to subscribe to roads in which the county may already own shares of stock.

The lexicons and law-books uniformly define an interest in any kind of property in the same way. If the word has no technical meaning, then it must be interpreted according to its ordinary meaning.

Adams v. Turrentine, 30 N. C., 147.
Blue v. McDuffie, 44 N. C., 13.
Randall v. Railroad, 107 N. C., 748, 750.

Whatever rule of construction may be followed, the interpretation must be the same, and, seeing this, on the first hearing, Judge Goff incorporated into the opinion the entire discussion of this point by the Supreme Court of North Carolina in Commissioners v. Snuggs, expressing briefly the approval of the Court.

On the other hand, in the opinion delivered on February 4, 1902, in Commissioners of Stanly v. Coler & Company, the Court assumes that the Legislature did not mean "interest" in the sense of "pecuniary interest," because the qualifying word was inserted in the Constitution, in reference to the State, but was omitted from the statute. The Court said the words, "in which a citizen of a county may have an interest" in a railraod would seem to be the appropriate words to express the general interest which the whole body of the people of a county have in a railroad which they believe will benefit them, as distinguished from direct pecuniary interest of the county as a corporation." This arbitrary construction of the word by the Court of Appeals is in direct conflict with the authorities cited, and is not supported by a single reference to law-book or lexicon. The construction of the State Court is set aside without a discussion, because that Court, following the overwhelming weight of authority, held that the word "pecuniary" could only intensify and emphasize the word "interest," and that the word "interest," in such a connection, was intended to denote pecuniary interest, and was, except for the purpose of emphasis, surplusage. But half of section 1996 is declared surplusage by the Court of Appeals in order to lean against the construction of the State Court.

This opinion is remarkable in that it disposes of the ruling of a State Court with so little ceremony, and in that, though overruling the construction given by the State Court to its own statute, it substituted its own interpretation, without citing an authority to sustain its views. Indeed, no reason whatever is given for rejecting the definition of the Court, though it would seem that the consensus of opinion in all Courts has been that, when applied to property, an interest means a pecuniary interest; and no regret is expressed for disregarding the State's construction.

Was it not reasonable and proper that the Supreme Court of North Carolina should adopt the definition given both by law-books and dictionaries, and should have added that such an interpretation of a statute enacted by the reconstruction Legislature was in harmony with the policy of the reconstruction Constitution? Of this, that Court, having knowledge of the peculiar conditions in the State and its policy, as indicated by a comparison of its various laws and their interpretations, was certainly more competent to judge. (See discussion of policy, post.)

Judge Boyd, in the concurring opinion, in Commissioners v. Coler, supra, declares it to be both the right and duty of the Court of Appeals to "construe the language of sections 1996-2000 according to their natural and proper meaning"; but he fails to refer to law-books or lexicons from which that Court gathered the "natural and proper meaning."

We challenge the respondents to produce authority of Courts or scholars for such a definition of interest as applied to a railroad.

The statute requires the subscription must be "necessary to aid in the completion of any railroad," etc.

The petitioners respectfully insist that the word "COMPLETION" has also a most material bearing upon the question of Legislative authority, that is, in indicating the class of counties to which the act refers.

Judge Goff, in delivering the unanimous opinion of the Circuit Court of Appeals, 96 Fed. R., supra:

"But did the sections above mentioned give additional and complete authority to order the elections, issue the bonds and levy the taxes to pay them, principal and interest? Section 1996 is in these words: 'The Boards of Commissioners of several counties shall have power to subscribe stock to any railroad company or companies when necessary to aid in the completion of any railroad in which the citizens of the county may have an interest.' It will be necessary, in order that that section may be construed to give authority to the Commissioners to issue the bonds, that the language should include a railroad not begun to be built before the Constitution was adopted; that the word 'completion' should be construed 'building' or 'construction,' extending even to the building of a new road; for, in the case before us, it appears that the road had not begun to be built. We can not see why the word 'completion' should be thought to have been used by the legislators in any other sense than the one most usual and natural. Ordinarily, the words 'to complete' are understood to mean 'to finish,' 'to fulfill,' and the word 'completion' to mean the 'finishing' or 'accomplishing in full' of something which has already been commenced; as, for instance, it is most frequent to hear the word 'completion' used in connection with the finishing years and months of the education of the young. The object of the statute must have been to provide, by general act, means by which the counties, without special legislation for each county by separate bills, might be enabled to complete unfinished railroads in which the counties had a pecuniary interest. At the time of enactment of the statute of 1868-'69, and always since that time, any county of the State, duly observing the limitations of section 7 of Article VII of the Constitution, and under an act passed according to the requirements of section 14, Article II, of the Constitution, could, and can, subscribe to the capital stock of a railroad company, whether unfinished or to be begun. The act of 1868-'69, however, considering the condition of the affairs then existing—that is, that there were counties which had a pecuniary interest in the railroads that had been begun, but unfinished—enabled such counties to make subscriptions of bonds to complete such unfinished roads at the earliest moment and with the least cost, by general law, passed according to section 14, Article II, of the Constitution."

THE LEGISLATURE OF NORTH CAROLINA INTENDED TO EMPOWER ONLY THOSE COUNTIES WHICH HAD ALREADY INVESTED IN THE STOCK OF A RAILROAD COMPANY, BUT HAD NOT THEREBY EFFECTED THE COMPLETION OF THE LINE, TO MAKE AN ADDITIONAL SUBSCRIPTION TO THE STOCK.

Because, FIRST, any other construction would have allowed a subscription to be made by any county in the State, for the citizens of Wilkes County, by reason of vicinage, had no other or greater interest "in the railroad than any other citizen of the State."

SECOND. According to all rules of construction, it must be assumed that the Legislature intended to describe a class of counties, and limit the power to them, since it is an established rule that the Courts must, if possible, give effect to all of the words of a statute, as the Supreme Court of North Carolina did; whereas, the Court of Appeals, in order to sustain the bonds, construed the word of limitation as mere surplusage.

THIRD. It is an historical fact, alluded to in Galloway v. Chatham Railroad Co., 63 N. C., 147, and University v. Holden, 63 N. C., that counties, as well as the State, had been lending their credit and subscribing to the stock of railroad companies, and that Sec. 14, Article II, and Sec. 7, Article VII, of the Constitution of 1868, had been inserted in that instrument to restrain counties from reckless expenditures of this kind, just as Secs. 1, 4, Article VI, had been framed as a check upon extravagant legislation by the State (see 63 N. C., page 147).

FOURTH. Sections 1996 to 2000 of The Code were first enacted by the reconstruction Legislature of 1868, which attempted to shape the statutory law so as to bring it into harmony with the Constitution, and it is in harmony with the general policy of the State to construe the restrictive clause of section 1996 as conferring the authority to subscribe on counties already interested pecuniarily in the railroad to which they propose to subscribe, just as the Legislature, in order to protect investments already made by the State, was empowered to subscribe to railroads in which the State had already become interested.

FIFTH. Section 3766 of The Code (enacted in 1868) provides that where statutes are re-enacted, "the portions not altered are to be considered as having been the law since their enactment; and at the time of their enactment." As is shown by the judicial history of the State, many counties, like Rutherford, had issued bonds in payment of subscriptions to the stock of railroad companies before the Constitution of 1868 was ratified, or the railroad was built across their borders (Hendricks v. Railroad, 101 N. C., 617), and it was the interest of such counties, as it was the policy of the State, to have power to protect such investments.

Neither The Code, sections 1996 to 2000, nor the charter, are sufficiently specific to comply with Article V, sections 6 and 7, of the Constitution.

In Commissioners of Buncombe County v. Payne (123 N. C., 432, 488, decided December 8, 1898, a month after the opinion was filed in Commissioners v. Call, on November 9, 1898, and during the same term), the Court said, at page 448:

"A general act, authorizing any and all counties to issue bonds, would be invalid, especially when (as in the case here) it is necessary to exceed the Constitutional limitation to pay interest or principal. Tate v. Commissioners, 122 N. C., 812 (at page 815); Herring v. Dixon, Id., 420 (at page 124)."

In Commissioners of Wilkes v. Call, 123 N. C., 308 (at page 324), Justice Douglass said, in reference to the necessity for specific statutes:

"If the word 'uncompleted' can refer to any road not yet begun, and the word 'interest' apply to a mere friendly feeling or supposed advantage to be derived from the general building up of a country, then the several counties may go on forever subscribing unlimited amounts to any railroad in esse or in future that may be located within the range of their knowledge. Such a construction would simply nullify the Constitution by making its explicit restrictions vain and worthless. It can not be adopted by us, but, if we were forced to adopt it, we would be equally forced to declare those sections null and void. If they mean that, they have no place upon the statute books. While the Legislature may, in individual cases, grant to specific counties the necessary authority, in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution and subject to its restrictions, it can not, by a sweeping act of unlimited application, utterly destroy its operation. If the Legislature or the railroad company or the county had placed any such construction on those sections, additional legislation would have been deemed useless, and the recitals in the bonds would have been different."

. In short, the declaration of the State Court is, that the sections referred to, if susceptible of the construction placed upon them by the Circuit Court of Appeals, were in violation of the Constitution (referring, of course, to Article V, sections 6 and 7).

Article V, sections 6 and 7 are as follows:

"Sec. 6. Taxes Levied by County Commissioners.

"The taxes levied by the Commissioners of the several counties for county purposes shall be levied in like manner with the State taxes, and shall never exceed the double of the State tax, except for a special purpose, and with the special approval of the General Assembly.

"Sec. 7. Acts Levying Taxes Shall State Object, etc.

"Every act of the General Assembly levying a tax shall state the special object to which it is to be applied, and it shall be applied to no other purpose."

There is no finding as a fact, in Commissioners v. Payne, supra, that the levy of a tax, sufficient to meet the interest "or principal" at maturity, would exceed the Constitutional limit (of sixty-six and two-third cents on the hundred dollars in value of property taxed). But the Court takes judicial cognizance of public law, and reports of the Auditor, as to the assessed value of property and the amount of taxes imposed. Upon this information, which is within the reach of every citizen who can read, as well as of the Court, the Court declared that it would be necessary to exceed the limit in order to pay interest and principal at maturity of the Buncombe debt.

For like reason, Justice Douglass said, in Commissioners v. Call (123 N. C., page 324), in condemning the construction of The Code now adopted by the Circuit Court of Appeals, which would allow all counties to subscribe "unlimited amounts to any railroad in esse or in futuro, that may be located within the range of their knowledge," said:

"Such a construction would simply nullify the Constitution by making its explicit restrictions vain and worthless. It can not be adopted by us, but, if we were forced to adopt it, we would be equally forced to declare those sections null and void. If they mean that, they have no place upon the statute books."

Judge Douglass was warranted in declaring, of his judicial knowledge, that it would be necessary for Wilkes County to exceed the Constitutional limit. Were we to concede the soundness of the position taken by the Court of Appeals, that it is not essential to levy a special tax "in the same bill," except when the tax will exceed the limit, then our position would be tenable under even that rule.

The Construction Placed by Justices Clark and Douglass, Speaking for the Court in the Buncombe and Wilkes Cases, Upon the State Constitution, Finds Support in Older Adjudications of the State Court.

THE SETTLED LINE OF DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF NORTH CAROLINA, PRIOR TO OCTOBER 1st, 1889, WHEN THE WILKES COUNTY BONDS WERE ISSUED, IS IN ACCORD WITH THE RULING IN COMMISSIONERS V. PAYNE, SUPRA, THAT A GENERAL ACT PURPORTING TO AUTHORIZE "ANY AND ALL COUNTIES TO ISSUE BONDS WOULD BE INVALID BECAUSE OF FAILURE TO PROVIDE FOR LEVYING A SPECIAL TAX."

In Galloway v. Chatham Railroad Company, 63 N. C. R., 151, 152 (decided at January Term, 1869), the Court held that there were two conditions upon which the State should be allowed to contract a new debt before the bonds of the State should be at par (under a fair interpretation of Article IV, Sec. 5, of the Constitution).

1st. Unless it (the Legislature) shall, in the same bill, levy a special tax to pay the interest annually, and,

2d. "Unless the subject be submitted to a direct vote of the people of the State, and be approved by a majority of those who shall vote thereon."

The Court held in that case that the meaning of the section is that "The General Assembly shall have no power to create new debt or pecuniary obligation (except in two specified cases), unless a special tax be levied in the same bill to pay the interest."

Thirty years later, Justice Clark, delivering the opinion of the Court in Commissioners v. Payne, 123 N. C., at page 488, construed sections 6 and 7 of Article V of the Constitution of North Carolina, which is as follows:

"Section 7.—Every act of the General Assembly levying a tax shall state the special object to which it is to be applied, and it shall be applied to no other."

In connection with the prohibition in section 6 of Article V, that the tax levied by the counties "shall never exceed the double of the State tax, except for a special purpose, and with the special approval of the General Assembly."

Judge Clark declared, for the Court, that neither the general provision of The Code, Sec. 1999, nor the general provision of the charter of the Northwestern North Carolina Railroad Company, construed in connection with that of the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad Company, was sufficiently specified to confer authority on Wilkes County to subscribe or issue the bonds, or levy the tax to meet the principal and interest of the bonds.

The provisions of The Code and of the charter referred to are as follows:

"Sec. 1996. The Boards of Commissioners of the several counties shall have power to subscribe stock to any railroad company or companies, when necessary to aid in the completion of any railroad in which the citizens of the county may have an interest."

"Sec. 1999. In case the county shall subscribe the amount proposed in bonds, the Board of Commissioners shall have power to fix the rate of interest, not to exceed the rate of eight per cent, when the interest on said bonds shall be payable, and at what place, and shall also fix the time and place of paying the interest, and shall also determine the mode and manner of the same; and also to raise by taxation, from year to year, the amount necessary to meet the interest on said bonds."

"Sec. 2000. The taxes authorized by the three preceding sections to be raised for the payment of interest or principal, shall be collected by the Sheriff in like manner as to other State taxes, and be paid into the hands of the County Treasurer, to be used by the Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners as directed by this chapter."

SECTION 12 OF THE CHARTER (PAGE 54 OF PRINTED RECORD), SECTIONS 33 AND 36 OF THE CHARTER OF THE ATLANTIC AND NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD (PAGES 54 AND 55 OF THE PRINTED RECORD).

"Sec. 12. Be it further ordained, that the stockholders of said company may pay the stock subscribed by them either in money, labor, material for constructing said road, as the board of directors may determine, and that all counties or towns subscribing stock to said company shall do so in the same manner and under the same rules and regulations and restrictions as are set forth and prescribed in the act incorporating the North Carolina and Atlantic Railroad Company, for the government of such towns and counties as are now allowed to subscribe to the capital stock of said company."

Chapter 136 of the Laws of North Carolina, session 1852.

"Sec. 33. Be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any incorporated town or county near or through which said railroad may pass to subscribe for such an amount of stock in said company as they shall be authorized to do by the inhabitants of said town or the citizens of said county, in manner and form as hereinafter provided."

"Sec. 36. Be it further enacted, that for the purpose of paying the quotas on said stock as may be called for, or the installments of such subscriptions as may fall due, the town authorities and the Justices of the county shall have power to appoint an agent or agents to negotiate a loan or loans for and in the name of such town and county; and it shall be the duty of the authorities of such town and the Justices of such county to levy such taxes annually on the persons, lands and other personal property within such town and county as may be sufficient to pay the amount of such loan or loans and the interest thereon, and as said town authorities and Justices of such county shall deem necessary and proper, and to make such order or orders as shall be deemed necessary for the due collection and payment of the same; and the stock subscribed on behalf of such town and county shall stand pledged for the payment of the loan thus authorized to be contracted."

The Constitution of North Carolina provides as follows:

"Article II, Sec. 21.—The style of the acts shall be: The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact."

The Supreme Court of North Carolina, in State v. Patterson, 98 N. C., 660, 661, 662, 665, 666 (decided September, 1887, two years before the bonds were issued), held that a statute in all other respects in the form prescribed, but without the prescribed enacting clause, was void.

The Court declared all of the requirements of the Constitution to be mandatory, using, at pages 661, 662, the following language:

"It (the Constitution) is not to be disregarded, ignored or suspended, or broken, in whole or in part, nor can any officer, or a co-ordinate branch of the government, supply, superadd or assume power and authority not conferred by it. In this latter respect, it expressly provides that "all powers not herein delegated remain with the people.

"More particularly, for the present purpose, when the Constitution prescribes and directs in terms, or by necessary implication, that a particular power shall be exercised in a specified way, or a particular thing shall be done by a particular co-ordinate branch of government—as the Legislature—or by a particular officer or class of officers, and prescribes the way and manner of doing it, such direction can not be disregarded; a due observance of it is essential, because the Constitution so provides, and its provisions are not in vain or of trifling moment. It is not of the nature of constitutions of government to provide non-essentials—useless, unimportant details—such as may be disregarded and dispensed with. As we have said, they are organic —made upon solemn consideration by the sovereign authority, and contain general, essential provisions—details are avoided, unless deemed important—essential.

"The answer to these and like questions must be, that requirements of the Constitution shall prevail and be observed; and when it prescribes that a particular act or thing shall be done in a way and manner specified, such direction must be treated as a command, and an observance of it essential to the effectiveness of the act or thing to be done. Such act can not be complete—such a thing is not effectual—until done in the way and manner so prescribed." Wilkes County Commissioners v. Coler, 180 U. S., 506, 521.

Justice Clark, in Commissioners v. Payne, 123 N. C., at page 488, construed the command contained in the latter half of section 6, and in section 7, of the Constitution according to the rule laid down in State v. Patterson, supra, two years before the bonds were issued in 1889, to-wit, in September Term, 1887. Justice Douglas followed the same rule when he declared that the provisions of the charter and the sections of The Code had no place on the statute book, if susceptible of the interpretation that they gave the same general authority to other counties as was given to Forsyth County.

By reference to Bank v. Commissioners, 116 N. C., 339, and Bank v. Commissioners, 119 N. C., 214, it becomes apparent that the Court of Appeals drew an inference from the two opinions that was unwarranted. The controversy was as to the validity of a subscription by the town of Oxford to a railroad company, which was chartered to build a railroad connecting the town of Oxford with the Coast Line, just as the ordinance of 1868 authorized the connection of Winston-Salem, in Forsyth County, intersecting by a line with the North Carolina road somewhere from Greensboro to Lexington. The town of Oxford was designated as the initial point of the proposed road, and the sufficiency of the authority was questioned in the first case (see 116 N. C., 363), because the Legislature had failed to provide in the charter itself the machinery for holding the election, and the Court decided that the general acts providing for holding such elections furnished the necessary authority as to the manner of holding them and counting votes. But it was not till the question was raised on the second appeal (119 N. C., 214), that the Supreme Court of North Carolina ever considered whether the authority to create the debt, even with the approval of the voters of the town, had been granted by the Legislature, and, then, apart from the question of estoppel, the discussion, on the argument and in the opinion of the Court, was directed to the new evidence showing that the statute relied on as authority for issuing the bonds was not enacted in accordance with the requirements of Article II, Sec. 14, of the Constitution.

It is a significant fact that the Act of 1868 (Code, Secs. 1996 to 2000), was not referred to by Justice Bynum in the opinion in Belo v. Commissioners, nor by counsel in the argument of that case, though the action was brought by Mr. McCorkle, former Reporter and one of the ablest lawyers in the State, and though the case was decided eight years after the passage of the act of 1868-'9.

THE CASES OF HERRING V. DIXON, 122 N. C., 420, AND TATE V. COMMISSIONERS, 122 N. C., 812, SUSTAINED JUDGE CLARK'S POSITION AS TO THE INSUFFICIENCY OF STATUTES PURPORTING TO CONFER GENERAL AUTHORITY ON COUNTIES TO CREATE DEBTS, EXCEPT FOR NECESSARY EXPENSES.

It will be observed that the act construed in Herring v. Dixon, supra, conferred certain powers on three counties specifically named in the act, to-wit, Green, Wilson and Wayne, and that the statute construed in Tate v. Commissioners, supra, named Haywood County as the donee of certain power.

No Power to Wilkes County is Written in the Charter by the Reference to the Other Charter, Because:

1st. It is a familiar and elementary rule of construction that grants of powers to municipal corporations by a sovereign State are construed strictly, both as to the designation of the donees of the powers, and the nature and extent of the authority granted.

2d. It is not pretended that there is any grant of power in the charter itself to any county to subscribe, except that contained in section 12, supra, to-wit, "all counties or towns subscribing stock to said company, shall do so in the same manner and under the same rules, regulations and restrictions as are set forth and prescribed in the act incorporating the North Carolina and Atlantic Railroad Company, for the government of such towns and counties as are now allowed to subscribe to the capital stock of said company." This designates no county, either by name or "writing into" the sections referred to. The counties that do subscribe under the ordinance of 1868 must "do so in the same manner and under the same rules and regulations and restrictions as are prescribed" in the other charter. The provisions of Chapter 136, Laws of 1852, "are written into" the ordinance for the purpose of furnishing a method of proceeding in submitting the question of subscription to the people and making a subscription after voting.

3d. It is a forced construction which interprets a reference to the "rules, regulations and restrictions" imposed in another charter "for the government of such towns and counties as are allowed to subscribe to the capital stock of said company, as a grant of power to all such counties as lie near the line of the new company, because "all counties near or through which" the line of the older company passed were permitted by express grant of form to subscribe to the company building it. This is a claim that the power to subscribe is given to Wilkes County by implication, arising out of the charter. Judge Douglas, in Commissioners v. Call, 123 N. C., at page 316, meets that suggestion as follows:

"But corporate powers can never be created by implication nor extended by construction. No privilege is granted unless it be expressed in plain and unequivocal words, testifying the intention of the Legislature in manner too plain to be misunderstood. When the State means to clothe a corporate body with a portion of her sovereignty, and to disarm herself to that extent of powers which belong to her, it is so easy to say that we will never believe it to be meant when it is not said; and words of unequivocal import are so easily inserted by mistake or fraud, that every consideration of justice and policy requires that they should be treated as nugatory, when they find their way into the enactments of the Legislature. In the construction of a charter, to be in doubt is to be resolved; and every resolution which springs from doubt is against the corporation. This is the rule sustained by all the Courts in this country and in England. No other has ever received the sanction of any authority to which we owe much deference. This Court has asserted it times without number. We have ruled five or six important cases upon it within the last year. We seem not to have made much impression on the professional mind, and we are probably making little now. But when respectable counsel call upon us hereafter (as they doubtless will) to enlarge corporate powers by construction, we can only repeat again and again that our duty imperatively forbids it. The privileges of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company may be too rigidly restricted. If the usefulness of the company would be increased by extending them, let the Legislature see to it. But let it be remembered that nothing but plain English words will do it."

In Belo v. Commissioners (upon which the Court of Appeals rests its decision) we find (76 N. C., at page 493) the following:

"This rule, however, which subsists between individuals, is much modified in respect to corporate bonds, such bonds can be issued only in pursuance of a special grant of power, and the party claiming the benefit of such bonds must show power in the corporation to issue them."

4th. The Court, in Call v. Commissioners, supra, at page 313, in discussing the effect of Sec. 12, said:

"That said ordinance can not be relied on to support the validity of the bonds at issue is apparent for several reasons: First, we do not see that any authority whatever was given or attempted to be given by either of these sections to Wilkes County to subscribe to the capital stock of this company."

5th. The fact can not be ignored that the Court was influenced in Belo v. Commissioners (76 N. C., at pages 497, 498) by the expressed view that the act of August, 1868, "validated both the county subscriptions and the issue of bonds," as will appear from the following (see page 496):

"Declaring, as we do, that the ratifying act of August, 1868, was a curative act, and validated both the county subscription and the issue of the bonds, if any defects existed therein—and it has been one purpose of this opinion to show that the bonds were valid in the hands of bona fide holders without the aid of this healing act—the proposed evidence of the defendant became immaterial and irrelevant. As a matter of law, the bonds were valid, and the Court did not err in so declaring."

It is significant that "the proposed evidence of the defendant became immaterial" only in view of the ruling that the curative act of August, 1868, validated the subscription and bonds (see extract). It nowhere appears what the evidence was, but there can be no question that the defendant, Forsyth County, offered evidence which, but for the curative act, would have been material. The act of 1868 was then treated as a valid act. Now, in the light of the evidence adduced, the Supreme Court of the United States has held that it is no law. The material evidence excluded, because immaterial on account of the treating the act of 1868 as valid, might have turned the scales, as it would have gone to the jury upon the issue submitted. It is important to recollect that, just after the declaration by the Court (Belo v. Commissioners, 76 N. C., page 498), that "the proposed evidence of the defendant became immaterial and irrelevant" in view of the fact that the curative act validated the bonds, the Court proceeds, as pertinent to that part of the discussion, to make the following statement:

"The only issue submitted to the jury was, 'Is the plaintiff the bona fide owner and for value of the bonds and coupons mentioned in the pleadings, and was he such at the commencement of the action?'"

The Court below excluded the testimony offered by the defendant bearing upon the validity of the bonds, announcing as "a matter of law that the bonds were valid," and refused to submit any issue as to the validity, and the Supreme Court sustained this ruling, because the validity of a curative act, which, in the light of the evidence offered in this case, is no law, was not then questioned. (See 76 N. C., page 498.) Wilkes County v. Coler, 180 N. C., 506, 521. (See opinion, printed record, page 112.)

IT MUST BE REMEMBERED THAT THE ACT OF 1868 WAS RATIFIED AUGUST 11, AFTER THE RATIFICATION OF THE CONSTITUTION ON APRIL 24, 1868, IF THE SUPPOSITION THAT THE ACT OF 1868 WAS VALID, RENDERED IRRELEVANT AND INCOMPETENT TESTIMONY WHICH WOULD HAVE BEEN MATERIAL IN BELO V. COMMISSIONERS, SUPRA, IT FOLLOWS THAT THE ORDINANCE OF 1868, ALONE, DID NOT INVEST WILKES COUNTY WITH AUTHORITY TO SUBSCRIBE TO THE STOCK OF THE COMPANY, AND ISSUE BONDS IN PAYMENT OF SUCH SUBSCRIPTION.

See Questions Asked by the Court (Wilkes County Commissioners v. Coler, 180 U. S., 532):

"WAS WILKES COUNTY IN THE SAME CATEGORY WITH FORSYTH COUNTY? WAS THE ROUTE OF THE ROAD NORTHWEST OF SALEM AND WINSTON TO SOME POINT IN THE NORTHWESTERN BOUNDARY LINE OF THE STATE TO BE DETERMINED BY THE LEGISLATURE OR BY THE COMPANY? IF BY THE LEGISLATURE, WAS THE ROUTE EVER DETERMINED OTHERWISE THAN BY THE ACT OF 1879, WHICH HAS BEEN ADJUDGED NEVER TO HAVE BECOME A LAW OF THE STATE?

"DID WILKES COUNTY HAVE AUTHORITY UNDER THE ORDINANCE OF 1868, ALONE, TO AID BY A SUBSCRIPTION OF STOCK AND BONDS THE CONSTRUCTION OF THE SECOND DIVISION OF THE ROAD REFERRED TO IN THE ACT OF 1879, EXTENDING FROM THE TOWNS OF WINSTON AND SALEM, UP THE VALLEY OF THE YADKIN BY WAY OF JONESVILLE AND WILKESBORO, IN THE COUNTY OF WILKES, TO PATTERSON'S FACTORY IN THE COUNTY OF CALDWELL?"

Wilkes County Commissioners v. Coler, 180 U. S., at page 532.

Referring to the act of February, 1879 (printed record, pages 14 to 16), the Circuit Court of Appeals said, in the leading opinion (printed record, page 116):

"The act of February 20, 1879, which is recited in the bonds as authority for issuing them, definitely located this road running into Wilkes County. It does it by enacting that the Convention ordinance shall be amended by adding certain words, which make it read, when so amended, as follows (see section as amended, page 115).

Section 2 of the act of February 20, 1879, provides for convict labor being furnished for the purpose of constructing this second division; and section 4 provides for bond subscriptions by any county in the State. This act was invalid so far as it attempted to give power to the counties to create a debt, because it was not passed as laws for that purpose are required by the Constitution of North Carolina to be passed, but that invalidity does not affect the sections of the law which deal with other matters.

Rodman v. Washington, 122 N. C., 39 to 42.
Russell v. Ayers, 180—189.
Gambell v. McCrady, 75 N. C., 509.
Bank v. Commissioners, 119 N. C., 214.

So far as now appears, the amendment locating the road into Wilkes County, was validly passed and became a valid law of North Carolina."

The position upon which the Court thus rests its opinion may be summarized as follows: The act of February 20, 1879, is unconstitutional, because not passed in accordance with the requirements of Article 2, Sec. 14, of the Constitution, in so far as it attempts directly and in express language to authorize Wilkes County to issue bonds in payment of its subscription. But though the direct authority purporting to be given is void, Judge Morris held that the other provisions enacted in the same defective way, accomplished by indirection the same end by simply locating a new branch of an old road.

This proposition, if sustained as correct, effectually annuls Section 14, Art. II, of the Constitution, the interpretation of which, by the State Court, has been declared binding upon the Supreme Court of the United States. Almost every old charter which authorized the building of a railroad before 1868, also in terms authorized the construction of branch roads, and this ruling of the Circuit Court of Appeals would sanction any evasion of this plain prohibition of the Constitution by amendments to them enacted without a roll-call, provided such amendments purported to modify the general description of the route marked out in the charter by adding a more specific description of a branch. This would be to follow the State's interpretation only far enough to provide ready means of evading it. The Court cites several North Carolina cases to sustain this extraordinary conclusion. These decisions sustain the well-established principle that an act may be constitutional in part and unconstitutional in part, but we search in vain for sanction to the proposition that one part of an act may be void as authority to create a debt, because of the defective enactment of the whole act while another section of the act so passed confers authority on a municipal corporation to create the same debt.

It is true that in Rodman v. Washington the Court held the Act of 1897 for the support of graded schools in Washington "unconstitutional and void, in so far as the same purports to authorize and empower the Commissioners of the town of Washington to levy a tax for any such purpose as therein set out, "for that the said bill was never read three several times in each House of the General Assembly," etc. But we search the opinion in vain for a ruling that some other provision of the same act enabled the town to evade the constitutional inhibition.

In Russell v. Ayer, 120 N. C., 180, the Court held that the section of the Revenue Act of 1897, which was in violation of Art. V, Sec. 1, of the Constitution, in that it failed to observe the equation between property and polls, was void, and that the effect of this violation of the Constitution was to leave in force the ratio between poll and property established by the statute in force when the act of 1897 was ratified, though the other provisions of the act of 1897 not in violation of the Constitution must be enforced as valid. But we find in the opinion no intimation that this plain violation of the organic law could have been evaded by an artful draftsman. We find nothing in Bank v. Commissioners, 119 N. C., 214, to warrant the deduction that an act, invalid because of the manner of its enactment, in so far as it purports to confer authority upon a corporation by its expressed language, can be construed to confer the same authority by some reference in another section of an older statute.

The case of Gambell v. McCrady, 75 N. C., 509, sustains the general proposition that an act may be constitutional in part and may be unconstitutional in part, but nowhere lends its sanction to such an evasion of the organic law as seems to be approved by the Circuit Court of Appeals.

IF THE LEGISLATURE ALONE HAD THE POWER TO LOCATE THE LINE OR LINES TO BE CONSTRUCTED WEST OF WINSTON-SALEM, AND SUCH LOCATION, BY VIRTUE OF A SIMPLE ENACTMENT, WAS TO BE CONSTRUED AS AUTHORITY TO A

COUNTY TO CREATE A DEBT, THEN SUCH A STATUTE WAS IN VIOLATION OF ARTICLE II, SECTION 14, OF THE CONSTITUTION, AND VOID, IF NOT ENACTED AS THEREIN REQUIRED. THE LEGISLATURE CAN NOT DO INDIRECTLY WHAT IT IS PROHIBITED FROM DOING DIRECTLY. THE CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FAILED TO ADVERT TO VARIOUS AMENDMENTS TO THE CHARTER OF 1868, WHICH ARE REFERRED TO IN THE RECORD. AMONG THE ACTS SO OVERLOOKED IS THE ACT RATIFIED FEBRUARY 3, 1869 (ACTS OF 1868-'69, CHAPTER 62), ENTITLED "AN ACT TO REPEAL AN ACT ENTITLED AN ACT TO AMEND AN ORDINANCE OF THE CONVENTION ENTITLED AN ORDINANCE TO INCORPORATE THE NORTHWESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY, AND TO SUBSTITUTE THE FOLLOWING PROVISIONS FOR SAID ACT."

The second section of the last-named act provided for State aid to the first division of the road from Winston-Salem, for the Mount Airy division, and "for the purpose of aiding in the construction of the Yadkin Valley division of said railroad, running from Salem-Winston, by way of Louisville, thence by way of Yadkinville, in the county of Yadkin, or within one and a half miles thereof." By this act it was provided that the State should loan the company twenty thousand dollars a mile to construct the road by way of Yadkinville. This act has never been repealed in so far as it provides for a different route from Salem-Winston, westward. Some of the other acts referred to in the record, and printed in the brief of counsel for appellant in the Circuit Court of Appeals, are the following, to-wit:

Acts of 1869-'70, Chapter 100.
Acts of 1870-'71, Chapter 178.
Acts of 1871-'72, Chapter 25.
Acts of 1871-'72, Chapter 47.

The Circuit Court of Appeals Failed to Examine Thoroughly the Decisions of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, as Will Appear from Comparing Extracts from its Opinion with the Decisions of the State Court.

First, the Circuit Court of Appeals said in the opinion (record, page 117):

"Has the Supreme Court of North Carolina ever interpreted this amendment and declared its meaning? We do not find that it has."

In Commissioners v. Call, the majority opinion does not place the decision upon the contention that Wilkes County is not in the same category with Forsyth County, but upon a want of power affecting both alike, and upon the fact that an invalid enactment is recited on the face of the Wilkes County bonds as authority to issue them."

Compare the foregoing with the following, from Commissioners vs. Call, 123 N. C., at page 313:

"That said ordinance can not be relied on to support the validity of the bonds at issue is apparent for several reasons. First, we do not see that any authority whatever is given, or attempted to be given, in either of these sections, to Wilkes County to subscribe to the capital stock of this company."

It thus appears that the State Court rested its opinion, first of all, upon the ground, that no power was given to Wilkes County, not upon a want of power affecting Wilkes and Forsyth alike, though it is true that the testimony offered by the defendant in the Belo case was excluded, and the Supreme Court of North Carolina sustained the ruling below, because the Act of August 11, 1868 (which, in the light of new evidence—extracts from the Legislative Journals—has been since declared void), rendered that evidence irrelevent and immaterial. The Supreme Court, in the extract given above, laid down at the outset the proposition, that no authority had been granted to Wilkes County, not that both counties are in the same category. Thus the Court of Appeals misinterprets, and, by inadvertence, mistakes the grounds upon which the opinion (in Commissioners v. Call) is made to rest.

Second, the opinion of the majority of the Circuit Court of Appeals, in further support of the views, that the Act of February 20, 1879, vested authority in Wilkes County, said:

"The original charter ordinance of 1868, having given authority to construct a railroad by way of Salem and Winston, in Forsyth County, to some point on the northwestern boundary line of the State, and to construct branches, and the Legislature having afterwards validly enacted, that one of these branches running towards the northwestern boundry line of the State, to be called the second division, should be constructed by way of Wilkes County, there would seem no sound reason for construing the legislation so as to deny to Wilkes County that power to issue bonds which the Supreme Court of North Carolina had in 1877 held that Forsyth County had."

As I have already attempted to show, the Legislature could not evade the Constitution by giving indirectly to a county power to create a debt, when it was prohibited by Art. II, Sec. 14, from doing so directly. To declare the amendment of 1879, so far valid as to vest Wilkes County with authority to create a debt by marking out the route of the second division in Section 1 of the act, though Section 4 (printed record, pages 14-15) is to annul the Constitution and evade the decisions of the highest Courts, State and Federal Courts.

Third, the Circuit Court of Appeals said in effect, that there is nothing in the decisions of the Supreme Court of the State to sustain the late statement of that Court, that it was the policy of the framers of the Constitution of 1868 and of the Legislature, which gave its provisions full effect, to restrict counties and other municipal corporations in creating debts. That Court said:

"It is urged in argument that the policy of North Carolina was declared by the Constitution of 1868 to be hostile to permitting counties to bond themselves in order to subscribe to railroads which passed near or through them. We do not think this anywhere appears."

In discussing The Code, Secs. 1996 to 2000, in Commissioners v. Snuggs, 121 N. C., at page 402, Justice Montgomery said, for the Court:

"It is most reasonable to conclude that the policy and purpose of both the constitutional provision and the statute were the same, the only difference being that in case of State aid no ap- proval by a vote of the people was required, while a majority vote of the people was required in case of county aid. The object of the statute must have been to provide by a general act means by which the counties, without special legislation for each county by separate bills, might be enabled to complete unfinished railroads in which the counties had a pecuniary interest. At the time of the enactment of the statute 1868-'69, and always since that time, any county of the State, duly observing the limitations of Section 7, Art. VII, of the Constitution, and under an act passed according to the requirements of Section 14, Art. II, of the Constitution, could and can subscribe to the capital stock of a railroad company, whether unfinished or to be begun.

In support of the declaration of the Court, which the Circuit Court of Appeals say, "We do not think anywhere appears," we respectfully submit a portion of the opinion of Chief Justice Pearson, in University vs. Holden, 63 N. C. (filed at June Term, 1869), beginning at page 413:

"The evil which the Constitution seeks to prevent is not that of giving aid to individuals or corporations in the construction of railroads, but that of contracting new debts on the part of the State, the existing debts being almost too heavy to bear, and the credit of the State tottering under the load. A construction by which new debts may be contracted on a larger scale than one expressly prohibited, is not admissible upon any principle of the law. As this is a deduction from Galloway v. Jenkins, in which the Court was divided, I will put my conclusions also on the construction of all the provisions of Art. V.

III. The act under consideration is in violation of the Constitution in this: The tax levied by it disturbs the proportion which, by the Constitution, capitation tax must bear to the tax on the value of the property, to-wit: "The tax on a poll should be equal to the tax on three hundred dollars worth of property." Here we have the proportion. Then follows a provision: "The State and county tax combined shall never exceed two dollars on the head," and the necessary effect is, that the State and county tax on the value of property shall never exceed two dollars on three hundred dollars worth of property; and the effect also is that if the tax on a poll is less than two dollars, then the tax on three hundred dollars worth of property must be less in the same ratio. In other words, the tax on the poll is "the standard" by which the tax on property is levied.

Under two dollars, the power to levy a poll tax for State purposes is unlimited; this interest needs no protection, for it has a full representation in the General Assembly.

Counties are protected by Section 7, which provides: "Taxes levied for county purposes shall be levied in like manner with the State taxes, and shall never exceed double of the State tax, except for a special purpose, and with the special approval of the General Assembly."

Cities, towns and townships are protected by Art. VII, Sec. 7, which provides: "No debt shall be contracted, nor shall any tax be levied, except for necessary expenses, unless by a vote of a majority of the qualified voters therein."

The only remaining interest is that of property holders, in respect to State and county taxes. This interest is protected by the equation fixed between capitation tax and the tax on property. A statute which disturbs this equation breaks down the safeguard thrown around property by the Constitution. If it can be done to the extent of one-hundredth on one per cent, it may be done to the extent of one-tenth and there is no limit.

It was said in the argument, that this equation applies only to taxes levied for current expenses of the State and counties, and has no reference to taxation necessary to pay interest on the public debt, or the tax to be levied to pay the interest on any new debt.

1. I agree that if, under this equation, carried to its limits, the amount is not enough to meet current expenses, and, also, to pay interest on the public debt, then, for the excess needed, it is not only within the power, but it is the duty of the General Assembly to disregard the equation, for this protection to property must be taken to be subject in the injunction, "to maintain the honor and good faith of the State untarnished in regard to the public debt (Art. I, Sec. 6), and by Section 4 of the Article under consideration, it is ordained: "The General Assembly shall, by appropriate legislation and adequate taxation, provide for the payment of the interest on the public debt, and after 1880 it shall lay a special annual tax, as a sinking fund, to discharge the principal." I do not adopt the entire position taken by Mr. Haywood, that a specific tax is meant as a tax on land by the act, or on horses and cattle by the head. It is enough to admit that this tax is to be independent of the equation; as in Sec. 7, a tax for special county purposes, with the special approval of the General Assembly, may be levied without reference to the equation.

I do not agree to the position, that the tax required by Art. . ., Sec. 5, to be levied to pay the interest on any new debt, is not subject to equation; and that the powers to tax property in reference to new debts are unlimited, save by the discretion of the General Assembly. There is nothing, as we have seen there is, in the case in regard to taxation to meet the interest and principal of the existing debt, to take this taxation out of the equation. Its being called a special tax can not have the effect, for Section 6 requires that every act shall state the special object to which the tax is applied. On the contrary it is included in the equation by every rule of construction.

This fixed equation between poll tax and property tax gives significance to the provisions of the first clause of Section 5: "No new debt shall be contracted in behalf of the State, unless in the same bill a special tax is levied to pay the interest annually."

Compare the foregoing with the discussion in the same volume in Galloway vs. Chatham Railroad Company, to which Chief Justice Pearson refers in the foregoing citation from University v. Holder, and it will appear that the Court, in the two opinions, for the purpose of construction, discussed the provisions of Art. V of the Constitution, and the question whether these provisions restricted the State or its governmental subdivisions.

In matters of construction, the Court is not to confine itself to the particular section; but it is to consider the entire instrument, in order to find the general purpose and the object arrived at.

"To maintain the honor and good faith of the State untarnished, the public debt regularly contracted before and since the rebellion shall be regarded as inviolable, and never to be questioned." Art. I, Sec. 6.

"No law shall be passed to raise money on the credit of the State, or to pledge the faith of the State directly or indirectly for the payment of any debt, etc., unless the bill is read three times on three different days, and unless the yeas and nays on the second and third readings of the bill shall have been entered on the Journal." Art. II, Sec. 16.

"The General Assembly shall, by appropriate legislation, and by adequate taxation, provide for the prompt and regular payment of the interest on the public debt, and, after the year 1880, it shall lay a specific annual tax upon the real and personal property of the State, and the sum thus realized shall be set apart as a sinking fund, to be devoted to the payment of the public debt." Art. V, Sec. 4.

But the Court is also required to look at the previous legislation by which the evil, calling for these cumulative restrictions was caused, and this will furnish a key to the meaning, and open it so plainly to view, "that he who runs may read."

The war debt has been put out of the way by a dash of the pen. It will be found that most of the public debt was incurred in three modes: First, by subscribing for stock in railroad and navigation companies, and issuing bonds to pay for the stock, the State becoming a member of the corporation; this is the heaviest item, and amounts to, say eight millions of dollars; second, by issuing bonds of the State, and exchanging such bonds for a like amount of bonds of the corporation, the State not becoming a stockholder, and taking a collateral security of more or less value —this is the next heaviest item, and amounts to about three millions of dollars; third, by endorsing the bonds to corporation and taking a mortgage on some other collateral security—this amounts to about two millions.

It is a part of the judicial history of the State, that the counties had been subscribing to the capital stock of railroad companies, and hence the provisions of the Constitution, Art. II, Sec. 14; Art. V, Secs. 1, 6, 7; Art. VII, Sec. 7, and of the Act of 1868 (Code, Secs. 1996 to 2000), which left counties, like the State, at liberty, by a general provision of law to protect investments made before 1868, but subject to restrictions similar to those imposed on the State as to incurring other obligations.

Did not the citizen need even greater restrictions to protect him against municipal than State legislation?

Galloway vs. Chatham Railroad Company, 63 N. C., pages 152, 153, 154.

By comparing the citation given above, it will appear that for thirty years the Supreme Court of the State has been declaring that the lawmakers of 1868 intended to restrict the legislation of municipalities, as well as the General Assembly, so that neither could lend its credit without the approval of the voters interested, except to finish a railroad in which it had invested before April 24, 1878.

THE ORDINANCE OF 1868 DID NOT PLACE WILKES AND FORSYTH IN THE SAME CATEGORY.

Though the Supreme Court had, in Wilkes County Commissioners v. Coler, 180 U. S., at page 532, mentioned the Act of 1879, as a statute, "which has been adjudged never to have become a law of the State," drawing the deduction, that such a law could confer by a power, which its direct provisions were ineffectual to grant.

In opening the discussion as to the general authority granted by the ordinance of 1868, Judge Morris, speaking for the majority of the Court, said:

"The question now to be passed upon, therefore, is whether, independent of the invalid legislative enactment attempted to be passed subsequent to the Convention Ordinance of March 9, 1868, Wilkes County had the power under the ordinance to submit the stock subscription to the vote of the qualified voters, and upon authorization by a majority of the votes to issue the bonds and levy taxes to pay the interest and principal. If Wilkes County was in the same category with Forsyth County, the Supreme Court of North Carolina adjudged in the case of Belo v. Commissioners, 76 N. C., 489 (1877), that the power was conferred by the ordinance of the convention, and this ruling remained unaffected by any subsequent adjudication of the Supreme Court of North Carolina, and until these bonds were issued."

The argument of the Court to which we have adverted shows that "the invalid legislative enactment attempted to be passed subsequent to the Convention Ordinance of March 9th, 1868," seems to have been an after thought, as in the foregoing extract it seemed to be justly conceded that the act of 1879 was not a law that could confer any authority on the county of Wilkes.

The first section of the Ordinance of 1868 made "Salem and Winston, in Forsyth County," the only fixed and certain point on the proposed road, and Forsyth County was the only county through which the ordinance required the proposed road to be built (record, page 10).

Section 13 provided that the company should have power to construct branches of said road, one of which shall run from the towns of Winston-Salem, by way of Mount Airy, in Surry County, to line of the State of Virginia (record, page 13).

Leaving out of view the "legislative enactment attempted to be passed"—the Act of 1879—Wilkes County was left by the charter in the same category, not with Forsyth (in which the initial point of the main line is located by the charter), but with every county in the State other than Forsyth.

If the charter conferred this authority on Wilkes County, it would follow that the company might have projected branches from any point in the main line; for instance, Greensboro, or Winston-Salem, or any intermediate point thereon, to any point of the Atlantic coast, or on the boarders of either Virginia, Tennessee or South Carolina; and by virtue of locating such line, the act of the company, not of the Legislature, would vest authority not only in every county "through which," but in every county "near which" such line would pass.

The Supreme Court of North Carolina had, by a line of decisions running back for about a century before the bonds were issued, held that the word "near" was too indefinite to fix and determine location. Applying the principle, that Court had adjudged that a call for a stake, an indefinite point, in a known line, by a certain course, should be extended beyond the distance given so as to intersect with such line, while if the same call had been for a stake "near" such line, it should not be run or extended beyond the distance called for, because the word "near" designated no particular point.

Cansler v. Fife, 50 N. C. (5th Jones), 424, 427.
Mizzell v. Simmons, 79 N. C., 182.

In Cansler v. Fife (50 N. C., at pages 427, 428) the Court said:

"In respect to the question as to Rickman's line, we also concur with his Honor. There was no evidence by which the jury could locate that line; supposing it to have been located, the call for a Spanish oak, in or near Rickman's line, would not control course and distance, because the Spanish oak could not be found, and the word "near" is not sufficiently certain. How near? One pole or fifty? Either would satisfy the term "near."

"Harvy v. Goodman, 1 Dev. and Bat. Rep., 76."

In attempting to show that the line, which is called a branch in the void Act of 1879, is built as the second division, leaving out of view said void act, the Court (at page 116 of the record) said:

"The piece of railroad for which the bonds in suit were issued does run from Salem and Winston, in the general direction of the northwestern boundary line of the State, and, indeed, it seems evident that such a railroad, to some point in the northwestern boundary line of the State, must pass near or through Wilkes County."

Construing the ordinance "alone," the Court, in order to sustain the validity of the bonds, was driven to the necessity of holding as a matter of judicial knowledge, that a line through an adjacent county to Wilkes would be within the meaning of the ordinance (the charter) near to Wilkes County. "How near; one mile or fifty?" (50 N. C., page 428). Yet the law of North Carolina, before 1868, in October, 1889, was, that a jury must be instructed that the word "near" was too indefinite to determine location. Yet, the Court, in Wilkes County Commissioners v. Coler, 180, 506, 531, said:

"It is settled doctrine of this Court 'that the question arising in a suit in a Federal Court of the power of municipal corporations to make municipal securities,' is to be determined by the law, as judicially declared by the highest Court of the State, when the securities were issued, and that the rights and obligations of the parties accruing under such a state of the law, would not be affected by a different course of judicial decision subsequently rendered any more than by subsequent legislation."

"When the securities were issued" (in October, 1889) "the law of the State, as judicially declared by the highest Court of the State" for a century, was, that the word "near" was too indefinite, as a descriptive term, to fix and determine location, and consequently that the Court could not say judicially, nor allow a jury to determine, that near a county means in an adjacent county, or in a county between which and Wilkes there was only one county intervening.

Apparently doubting whether the position, that the charter route must pass near Wilkes County in order to reach the North Carolina boundary line of the State, and that, therefore, the charter would clothe Wilkes County with authority, as a county near the proposed line, the Circuit Court of Appeals, in the same paragraph, fell back upon the position, that, "the invalid legislative enactment attempted to be passed"—"the Act of February 20, 1879, which is recited in the bonds as authority for issuing them, definitely located the road running into Wilkes County." In explanation the Court said further (record, page 116): "It does it by enacting, that Section 13, of the Convention Ordinance, shall be amended by adding certain words, which make it read when so amended as follows:

"So far as now appears, the amendment locating the road into Wilkes County, was validly passed and became a valid law of North Carolina."

If the last paragraph means that Section 4 (page 15, of the record) is valid, then it overruled the Supreme Court and contradicted its own statement in a previous paragraph that the attempted legislation was void.

If the Court intended to rest its ruling upon the authority of the ordinance alone, it was inconsistent and illogical to fall back upon the later act.

If the Court meant to assert the position that the authority was conferred by the Act of 1879, as an amendment, then that act would be valid, as a grant of power by virtue of the amendment to the charter in Section 2, but void as a grant of power by virtue of Section 4.

The Constitution (Art. II, Sec. 14) provides that, "No law shall be passed * * * to pledge the faith of the State, directly or indirectly, for the payment of any debt, or to impose any tax upon the people of the State, or to allow the counties, cities or towns to do so, unless the bill for the purpose," etc.

How, in the face of this prohibition, could Wilkes County be vested by the Act of 1879, with authority, which had not been previously granted, if that act was "no law?"

The Circuit Court of Appeals sought to correct the supposed mistake of the Supreme Court, in Wilkes County Commissioners v. Coler, in declaring that the Act of 1879 had never become a law of the State for any purpose, by holding that the legislation had indirectly authorized a county to pledge its faith through that section of the Constitution (it would seem needlessly), provided that such pledges should be made, neither directly nor indirectly."

The petitioners have attempted only to show errors in the leading opinion of the Court, and have not alluded to numerous errors of law and mistakes of fact contained in the concurring opinion, hoping to do this upon a final argument of the cause.

Counsel for Petitioners.
